One more month of Democratic times. Then we can reasonably expect something will be done to relieve the country.

The Nevada legislature has passed a bill legalizing prize fighting. But then what could you expect from a state that was solid for the great free silver swindle.

The strongest cabinet for years will be that of McKinley. Sherman, as secretary of state, Gage, as treasurer, and Alger, as secretary of war, make a combination that can't be beat.

The great McEwen has not hypnotized Editor Stivers of the Journal. The free silver barons did that nearly a year ago, and he has not fully recovered yet, although the elections nearly broke the spell.

Gov. Turney of Tennessee, granted 820 pardons during his term of two years. That is to say, he did more for his party than any other Democratic Governor, with the exception of Altgeld, says the St. Louis Democrat.

The Journal says the Tribune editor is densely ignorant of the money question, and the Tribune says the Journal editor is a demagogue and a calamity howler, and the general public is inclined to believe both are right.

The Journal did not publish the number of business failures the past week as it showed a large falling off as compared with the previous week and the same week in previous years. That would not suit its purpose to create business unrest.

Cloth Gowns.

Nothing exceeds in popularity, this season, for the usefully smart gowns that are not too elaborate for the street yet are sufficiently handsome for afternoon social functions, the whole family of plain cloth,—broadcloth, facedcloth with a satiny lustre, and silky-haired zibelines. All rich dark shades are popular in these cloths, but especially choice are dark plum and heliotrope, a rich hunter's-green, and golden brown. Among the blues a very trying, intensely bright shade, having a purplish cast, is occasionally seen, but it should be avoided as a snare by all but very young woman. It is so dominating a color that in most cases it eclipses its wearer and causes her to look countless years older.—From "Review of Fashions," in Demorest,s Magazine for February.

Jack Pine Minstrels.

The Jack Pine Minstrels are making very satisfactory progress with their rehearsals and the boys feel confident that they will give a better show than before. The strong chorus of last season has been strengthened by the addition of several good voices, and chorus singing will as before be a great feature of the entertainment. The music is new and up-to-date, and includes many of the most popular songs of the day. There will be a number of new specialties this year, The entertainment throughout will be clean and wholesome, refined and artistic, and everyone will thoroughly enjoy it. It is understood that arrangements will be made for an excursion from Staples on the second evening of the entertainment.

TRESPASSERS ON STATE LANDS.

BEWARE!

NOTICE is hereby given that any person or persons who cuts, removes or carries away any timber, standing or down, from any lands belonging to or under the control of the State of Minnesota, without first having obtained a legal permit from the STATE LAND COMMISSIONER, shall be deemed guilty, of willful trespass, and on conviction thereof subject to heavy fines and penalties.

Section 7, Chapter 163, General Laws of 1895, reads as follows:

"Whoever cuts or removes, or employs or induces any other person, firm or corporation to cut or remove any timber or other property from State lands, contrary to the provisions of this act (namely, a legal permit, or contrary to the provisions of such permit) or without conformity in each and every respect thereto, shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand (1,000) dollars, or by imprisonment in the State Prison not exceeding two (2) years, or by both, in case the trepass is adjudged to have been willful."

In addition to the criminal proceedings, the State Land Commissioner is required to collect treble damages (treble stumage value) for all such timber cut or carried away; or, he may confiscate the same wherever found, and sell the same for the benefit of the State.

No hardwood timber belonging to the State can be sold separate from the land. By hardwood is meant all varieties of timber outside of pine, spruce, cedar and tamarac.

All railroad companies, merchants and dealers in logs, manufactured lumber, railroad ties, cordwood, posts and piling, should exercise due care in dealing with customers, so as to protect themselves against any loss on account of timber illegally removed from State lands.

Depredations on State lands must be stopped at any cost. No leniency will be shown any trespasser. The provisions of the stringent land law of 1895 will be rigidly enforced.

Dated St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 1, 1897.

R. C. DUNN,
State Land Commissioner.

One more month of Democratic times. Then we can reasonably expect something will be done to relieve the country.

The Nevada legislature has passed a bill legalizing prize fighting. But then what could you expect from a state that was solid for the great free silver swindle.

The strongest cabinet for years will be that of McKinley. Sherman, as secretary of state, Gage, as treasurer, and Alger, as secretary of war, make a combination that can't be beat.

The great McEwen has not hypnotized Editor Stivers of the Journal. The free silver barons did that nearly a year ago, and he has not fully recovered yet, although the elections nearly broke the spell.

Gov. Turney of Tennessee, granted 830 pardons during his term of two years. That is to say, he did more for his party than any other Democratic Governor, with the exception of Altgeld, says the St. Louis Democrat.

The Journal says the Tribune editor is densely ignorant of the money question, and the Tribune says the Journal editor is a demagogue and a calamity bowler, and the general public is inclined to believe both are right.

The Journal did not publish the number of business failures the past week as it showed a large falling off as compared with the previous week and the same week in previous years. That would not suit its purpose to create business unrest.

Cloth Gowns.

Nothing exceeds in popularity, this season, for the usefully smart gowns that are not too elaborate for the street yet are sufficiently handsome for afternoon social functions, the whole family of plain cloth,—broadcloth, facedcloth with a satiny lustre, and silky-haired zibelines. All rich dark shades are popular in these cloths, but especially choice are dark plum and heliotrope, a rich hunter's-green, and golden brown. Among the blues a very trying, intensely bright shade, having a purplish cast, is occasionally seen, but it should be avoided as a snare by all but very young woman. It is so dominating a color that in most cases it eclipses its wearer and causes her to look countless years older.—From "Review of Fashions," in Demorest,s Magazine for February.

Jack Pine Minstrels.

The Jack Pine Minstrels are making very satisfactory progress with their rehearsals and the boys feel confident that they will give a better show than before. The strong chorus of last season has been strengthened by the addition of several good voices, and chorus singing will as before be a great feature of the entertainment. The music is new and up-to-date, and includes many of the most popular songs of the day. There will be a number of new specialties this year, The entertainment throughout will be clean and wholesome, refined and artistic, and everyone will thoroughly enjoy it. It is understood that arrangements will be made for an excursion from Staples on the second evening of the entertainment.

TRESPASSERS ON STATE LANDS.

BEWARE!

NOTICE is hereby given that any person or persons who cuts, removes or carries away any timber, standing or down, from any lands belonging to or under the control of the State of Minnesota, without first having obtained a legal permit from the STATE LAND COMMISSIONER, shall be deemed guilty, of willful trespass, and on conviction thereof subject to heavy fines and penalties.

Section 7, Chapter 163, General Laws of 1895, reads as follows:

"Whoever cuts or removes, or employs or induces any other person, firm or corporation to cut or remove any timber or other property from State lands, contrary to the provisions of this act (namely, a legal permit, or contrary to the provisions of such permit) or without conformity in each and every respect thereto, shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand (1,000) dollars, or by imprisonment in the State Prison not exceeding two (2) years, or by both, in case the trepass is adjudged to have been willful."

In addition to the criminal proceedings, the State Land Commissioner is required to collect treble damages (treble stumage value) for all such timber cut or carried away; or, he may confiscate the same wherever found, and sell the same for the benefit of the State.

No hardwood timber belonging to the State can be sold separate from the land. By hardwood is meant all varieties of timber outside of pine, spruce, cedar and tamarac.

All railroad companies, merchants and dealers in logs, manufactured lumber, railroad ties, cordwood, posts and piling, should exercise due care in dealing with customers, so as to protect themselves against any loss on account of timber illegally removed from State lands.

Depredations on State lands must be stopped at any cost. No leniency will be shown any trespasser. The provisions of the stringent land law of 1895 will be rigidly enforced.

Dated St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 1, 1897.

R. C. DUNN,
State Land Commissioner.

BRAINERD. - - MINNESOTA

A man who saves his words, usually saves his money.

A preacher, like a musician, should play without notes.

Do not blame servants who have a master that is not up to the standard.

If you consent to the naming of an umpire do not grumble when he decides.

It is a pity that a more distinct line cannot be drawn between community and individual rights.

Criticism acts on a man like a mustard plaster; if any is given you, hug it tight until it does you good.

Every one is the object of somebody's suspicion, and should regulate his conduct with that thought in mind.

A poultry show in Kansas City claims to have the costliest fowls in the world. But no one can make Bob Fitzsimmons believe it.

Ninety-two percent of all the families in Great Britain own property of a less value than $5,000. The other 8 per cent practically own all.

An Indianapolis highwayman tried to rob a St. Louis lawyer on a dark back street the other night, and now the lawyer is wearing a new gold watch.

Never urge a young lady to play for you on the piano after she has told you that she can't play without her notes—Even if she can you won't miss much, usually.

There is no such thing as a natural distribution of wealth among mankind. Men distribute it to themselves according to the dictates of their own shrewdness, good luck, greed, industry, honesty or dishonesty.

The men find it hard to be satisfactory. Charley Hamble, of Holton, was killed because he refused to marry; Jacob Holton, of Hamble, was killed because he wanted to marry. This all happened in Pennsylvania.

Because a man is eminent in national politics, does that imply that the public is well-bred when it demands from the newspapers an account of his daughter's gowns or her love affairs? If another man offers to the public his best thoughts, hoping earnestly to help some struggling soul in life, and his work commands universal attention and respect, why should his clothes, his accent, his family, be dragged into public view to gratify a million curious eyes?

A gospel wagon, run by a gasoline engine, is the newest device for spreading the gospel in New York city. It will be in the harge of two Baptist clergymen and their wives, and will patrol every portion of the city. The vehicle will contain a regular pulpit, an organ and a choir. During the cold weather a large tank of coffee will be placed in the wagon, and when it is too cold to preach the clergymen will distribute coffee and tracts to those around the wagon.

A peculiar state of affairs exists in Dorchester county, Maryland, in reference to the public schools. One of the main sources of school revenue for many years has been from local oyster licenses. A recent change in the law requires one-third of this revenue to be paid into the state oyster fund, thereby diminishing the school fund to the tune of about $4,000 a year. The salaries of country teachers now range from $180 to $270 per year, the latter being for the best qualified teachers in charge of the largest and most advanced schools. The question of increased school revenues will be a potent factor in Maryland politics during the coming year.

A novel charity has been organized by Lazarus Morgenthau, an unostentatious philanthropist of New York. Its purpose is to provide dowries to worthy German orphan girls who marry worthy men. At present its fund is large enough to furnish every year sixteen dowries of one hundred dollars each, but the founder expects that in a few years the society will have a fund of one million dollars, sufficient to make a wedding present of one hundred dollars in gold, every year, to four hundred worthy but parentless German girls. No regard is to be paid to the creed of the orphan, who may be married by any religious ceremony she desires, provided she is first joined to her husband by a public civil ceremony. The society's board of directors will be composed of one hundred Jews and one hundred Christians. Already six orphan societies—one Protestant, two Roman Catholic and three Hebrew—have been asked to select suitable applicants for the society's wedding presents.

A Washington colored boy took a pair of old shoes, which he had just purchased, to the station house Tuesday, and said to the chief that there was something wrong with them, he having noticed some shining substance in the heel of one of them, which he discovered accidentally in removing a piece of loose leather. The boy was told to take the shoes to a shoemaker and have them examined. He did so, and the shoemaker found ensconced in the heel a "railroad torpedo." The matter was again reported to the police and they are investigating it.

Right living is, in one sense, a living without making mistakes. To make mistakes is human, however, and a mistake may at least have in it the merit of activity. The person who does nothing may escape blundering, but a do-nothing policy is not often a help to progress. "Recently," said a notable speaker at a memorable gathering lately assembled, "I saw some people who have made no mistakes for thousands of years; they were in the museum of the University of Pennsylvania, in the Peruvian and Mexican departments, in glass cases."

A bronze statue of Ole Bull, the work of Jacob Fjelde, has just arrived in Minneapolis. It is an excellent likeness to the violin king, and will be placed in Loring park next summer. The statue is eight feet high and will be mounted on an artistic marble pedestal.

THE EARTH'S TEMPERATURE.

Some Observations Made in the Deepest Holes.

Physical geography teaches that the increase of temperature as we descend into the earth is about one degree Fahrenheit to every fifty-five feet descent. The following deep mines of the world show accurately the amount of this increase in the most notable instances: The deepest mine in the world is the Red Jacket shaft of the Calumet & Hecla mines, in the Lake Superior region, which has been sunk to a depth of 4,900 feet. The greatest depth in Great Britain is 3,474 feet; Belgium, 3,937 feet; Austria-Hungary, 3,672 feet; Victoria, 3,302 feet. In the Calumet & Hecla mines the increase of temperature is the least on record, being attributed to the presence of Lake Superior. On the other hand, the results of the Comstock are abnormally high, from the lode being heated by volcanic action and the presence of hot subterranean waters. The mean of a number of observations of the Red Jacket shaft gives an average of 60 feet per degree Fahrenheit. The deepest bore hole yet made was sunk by the Prussian government in 1893, and reached a depth of 6,572 feet, the increase being one degree Fahrenheit for 62.1 feet. In the Comstock mine it is so warm that sometimes it is impossible to work, due to the increased temperature, and ordinarily the men have to be changed very often, sometimes as often as once in twenty minutes.

Eating Dinner Backward.

An odd experiment with the kinetoscope took place not long ago in Boston. The subject was a man eating dinner, and the film, prepared especially for the occasion, was of unusual length, so that the whole performance could be recorded. The man entered the room, and, seating himself at a table, proceeded to cut up the food. The motion of the fork from the plate to his lips were carefully recorded until the last morsel of food had vanished. Then he arose and walked out of the room, leaving nothing on the table but bare dishes. The series of pictures was then reversed. It showed the man entering the room, walking backward. He sat down at the table, upon which there was nothing but bare dishes, and proceeded to extract food from his lips until he had filled the potato dish with potatoes and gradually put together a steak on the platter before him. Then he calmly backed out of the room, and the waiter did likewise with the meal that the man had apparently created. —Troy Times.

BLEW UP THE BANK

DISGUSTED DEPOSITORS SHOW THEIR RESENTMENT.

The Bank Only Paid Twenty Cents on the Dollar and the Depositors Got Riled—No Damage Was Done to the Bank Vault or Books—The Windows of Many Stores Shattered.

Hollidaysburg, Pa., Feb. 2.—An attempt was made to blow up the bank building lately occupied by the firm of Gardner, Morrow & Co., private bankers. A stick of dynamite was forced under the front door of the bank and then set off. An explosion like a roll of thunder followed. The windows of every establishment on the square were shattered by the force of the concussion, the sound being heard in all the surrounding towns.

The bank door was burst open and the entire floor torn up. No damage was done to the bank vault or the books, however. On the opposite side of the street from where the explosion occurred, the front of the First National bank, Frank Glessner's store, the residences of Charles Vowinckle, Maj. S. S. Barr, Mrs. Elizabeth Christy and Dr. James D. Humes, Stiffler's milinery store and Goldman's clothing store were all damaged by the shock, every plate glass window in the store being demolished. The motive for the crime is ascribed to the resentment and hatred of some depositor. THE LEGISLATURE.

The Grind of the Minnesota Law Mill.

St. Paul, Jan. 28.—The first business in the senate was the swearing in of H. H. Dunn as senator from the Sixth district in place of Frank A. Day. President Gibbs announced that Senator Dunn would serve on all the committees to which Senator Day had been appointed.

After the senate had gone through with the regular order of business, which included the introduction of several bills, the governor's nominations were taken up and disposed of.

The following bills were introduced:

To provide state aid for rural schools.

To amend the laws of 1894 relating to county agricultural associations and joint stock societies; providing for $12,000 state aid for such.

To regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors in counties; local option law.

In the House.

The greater portion of the time in the house session was given over to the introduction of bills, twenty-one new measures, and some of them of more than ordinary importance, were proposed. Mr. Laybourn introduced a measure fixing the weight of a legal bushel of coal at eighty pounds. Mr. Bruslettan introduced a bill allowing villages of a population exceeding 1,000 to vote upon the question of the dissolution of the village corporations and of incorporation as cities from the same territory. Mr. Grondahl introduced a bill designing to give a legal status and protection to cycle paths. It provides that upon the petition of not less than fifteen persons, the county commissioners shall direct the county surveyor to make a survey of any desired cycle path, and his report and plat is made part of the county records. Mr. Head introduced a bill providing any elector who resides twenty miles from the polling place in his own election district may secure from the clerk of courts a certificate of that fact, and upon presentation of this certificate he may be allowed to vote at the polling place nearest his residence if in the same county. Mr. Bergley offered a bill increasing the per diem of witnesses in criminal cases from $1 to $2 per day. Mr. Poetz proposed an amendment to the election law, in creasing the number of voters who must sign a petition for the nomination of a candidate within a congressional or judicial district, from 1 to 5 per cent of the voters in such district, with the further provision that the required number of signers in such cases shall not exceed 500.

Mr. Schmidt offered one of the most important bills of the day, providing for a fire marshal for the state, and prescribing a system by which incendiarism or carelessness as a cause of fires may be detected.

St. Paul, Jan. 29. — The Dunn-Day senatorial contest was called into active being in the senate by Senator Cole, who moved a reconsideration of the vote by which Frank A. Day's seat was declared vacant. Senator Cole voted with the majority in that memorable contest. He stated that there was serious doubts in the minds of many as to the effect of the vacation of Mr. Day's seat, to date from Jan. 31, 1895, would have on the legality of the Anderson land tax bill and other senate measures that became laws after that date. Debate followed during which it was shown that Senator Cole's motion was intended to pave the way for the introduction of a resolution in which the date of the vacancy of Day's seat will be left open.

President Gibbs then ruled that no motion would be entertained that carried with it the question of H. H. Dunn's right to the seat. Senator Cole asserted that no such intention attached to the resolution. In order to give the senators ample time to consider the matter, however, the motion was tabled for a day by a viva voce vote.

Senator Wyman introduced a resolution favoring the Anglo-American treaty, which, after much debate, was carried.

Among the important bills introduced were the following:

To provide for the establishment of another sub-experiment station.

To authorize corporations to increase the number of trustees.

To amend the tax laws.

To amend the penal code relating to larceny.

To appropriate $28,000 for the state fair.

To create a board of pardons and defining its duties; substitute for S. F. 76, introduced by Knatvold.

In the House.

Mr. Cray introduced a bill providing that all municipal elections in this state shall be held during the months of February, March, April or May, of each odd-numbered year. By request Mr. Snodgrass offered a bill proposing a constitutional amendment to allow women to vote in municipal elections. Mr. Feig introduced a bill appropriating $25,000 for the construction of a girl's dormitory at the state agricultural college. Mr. Brusletten proposed an amendment to the law relative to the annual school meetings in common school districts. Mr. McDonald proposed another bill requiring the inspection of cattle, sheep and swine designated for slaughter for human food. Mr. Donnelly offerred a resolution calling on the state auditor for information as to the cost of printing the official state ballots and the amount of fees charged against candidates for office.

The calendar was taken up and three bills given their third reading and passed. They were Mr. Smith's bill exempting a typewriter from execution; the judiciary committee's bill allowing district courts to issue writs of replevin, and Mr. Schmidt's bill to legalize certain acknowledgments. Mr. Heimerdinger called up his resolution calling for a special committee of seven to prepare a bill reducing state, county and legislative salaries, and naming 20 per cent as about the proper average reduction. The resolution was amended by striking out the 20 per cent limitation and all reference as to where the knife should be laid. After considerable discussion the resolution was adopted as amended.

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—The senate put in a very busy day. What with general orders, taken up for the first time and flooded with bills released from the judiciary and other committees, any number of new bills, resolutions, etc., the senators had their hands full and an all-day session was the result. Several bills were passed. Among them and most important, just at present, was the board of pardons bill, over which was a lengthy debate in committee of the whole while it was being considered under the head of general orders. While pursuing its devious and somewhat perilous course through general orders it was quite severely amended by taking away from the board the authority to appoint a clerk at a salary and directing that the clerical work shall be done by the clerk of the supreme court without compensation. The following bills were passed:

To amend the laws relating to the organization of cemetery associations.

Joint memorial to congress relating to the classification of railway mail clerks.

To legalize the issuance of bonds for the city of Moorhead.

The following bills were introduced:

To provide for assistance in the office of public examiner.

To prohibit the desecration of Decoration day.

To provide compensation for county surveyors.

To reorganize the faculty of the state agricultural school and university.

To provide a constitutional amendment relative to the taxation of railroads.

To regulate the election of delegates to political conventions.

In the House.

The house devoted most of two sessions to the discussion of the arbitration treaty, pending before the United States senate. That is to say, the discussion was based upon resolutions expressive of legislative opinion as to the treaty, but during an hour and a quarter of the debate in the forenoon, occupied by Mr. Donnelly it wandered very wide of the mark. During the afternoon session something was said about the treaty, and the final result of it all was that the adoption of the senate resolution, favoring arbitration in general, but carefully and explicitly refraining from an indorsement of the treaty, with an amendment offered by Mr. Douglas, expressive of opposition to the treaty unless the Monroe doctrine was specifically guarded.

Mr. Feig, from the committee on towns and counties, reported favorably the following bills: To require townships to maintain guide posts; to reenact section 1, chapter 176, Laws of 1889, relating to towns; to repeal chapter 298, Laws of 1895, for the enlargement of organized counties.

Mr. McDonald, from the committee on state library, reported the bill for traveling libraries favorably. Mr. Littleton reported several bills from the committee on crimes and punishment. The McDonald bill, giving the police power to "vag" criminals of reputation was reported for indefinite postponement.

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—The senate calendar was taken up yesterday and ten bills were passed. Other useless measures have been killed, and the upper house is now in a fair way of acquitting itself commendably in the matter of rapid and careful legislation. The senate concurred in the house amendment to Senator Wyman's arbitration treaty resolution.

A communication was received from the governor stating that he had withdrawn the appointment of Knute Bondy on the state board of equalization.

Senator Potter introduced a bill to provide for the loaning of the permanent school and university funds to counties.

Senator Knatvold introduced a bill to repeal the laws relating to bounties for the arrest of horse thieves.

The following bills were passed:

A bill relating to property exempt from taxation.

A bill relating to cemetery associations.

A bill for an act fixing the fees to be paid by applicants for certificates of declaration of intention to become citizens of the United States, and for certificates of full citizenship.

A bill in regard to the powers of the district court; may issue writs of certiorari.

A bill for an act to prevent the furnishing of impure water and prescribing punishment therefor.

The senate adjourned until 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

In the House.

The house spent the greater part of the day in committee of the whole considering bills, several of which were disposed of.

Mr. Hayter's bill proposing a constitutional amendment to make the governor ineligible for the office of United States senator excited the most general discussion. The committee of the whole recommended the bill for indefinite postponement and the house indorsed the action.

The following bills were introduced:

Relating to actions against co-partnerships.

Relating to limitations of appropriations to certain institutions.

To provide for the creation of a department of anthropology in the state university.

Relating to the renewal of judgments of the courts of this state.

Relating to the organization of annuity, safety deposit and trust companies.

To provide for further publicity as to the financial condition of banks doing business in this state.

St. Paul, Feb. 1.—In the house the speaker presented a communication from the governor transmitting the various reports on the question of the location of the new insane asylum. There were three reports, a majority report, a minority report and a supplemental majority report. A motion that the reports should be printed was adopted as was also a resolution calling on the governor for the minutes of the commission's meetings.

Mr. Feig's resolution opposing the bill now pending in congress for national grain inspection was adopted.

The following bills were introduced:

To provide for submission to the voters of each county, or any subdivision thereof, of the question of granting license for the sale of intoxicating liquors.

To compel the publication of the names and officers and stockholders of all banking institutions and the amount of stock held by each.

To provide for the immediate enforcement of the liability of the directors and stockholders of banking institutions for the benefit of creditors.

To amend section 1863, General Statutes of 1894, relating to obstruction of public highways.

To prevent fraudulent dealing in cider, wine, maple molasses or syrup, maple sugar, jellies, olive oil, buckwheat flour, the edible nuts, allspice, ginger cinnamon, mace, cloves, black and red pepper and mustard.

To provide for the election of inspectors of mines by the people.

Giving liens on logs and other forest products for the better security of material men and others.

To encourage and promote immigration.

To provide for the recovery of legal expenses, brought by creditors of corporations to enforce the liability of its stockholders.

Regulating the fees of sheriffs on sale of land on execution.

To amend section 31, chapter 36, General Statutes 1878, relating to hiring teachers for public schools.

The house spent the remainder of the day in committee of the whole considering bills.

St. Paul, Feb. 2.—The house took up Mr. Schmidt's bill to provide for a board, consisting of the governor, auditor and public examiner, to select depositories for state funds, and spent most of the session wrangling over it. On the part of the opponents of the bill a good deal of the discussion wandered very far from the provisions of the bill, and they tried to read into the measure a number of things that did not belong there. Some of the country members seemed to think that it was intended as a blow at the country banks, and opposed it accordingly. When the bill was reached on general orders in committee of the whole, Mr. Anderson in the chair, Mr. Scott moved to refer the bill to the committee on banks and banking. This proposition finally prevailed, but not until a long discussion had occurred. Mr. Ferris offered an amendment, providing that at least 2 per cent interest should be paid. Mr. McDonald offered another amendment providing that at least three of the five bondsmen should not be officers or directors of the bank upon whose bond they became sureties.

Aside from the consideration of this question the session of the house was of a routine character. Mr. Olds presented a petition from the grand jury of Yellow Medicine county praying for a modification of our grand jury system, so that criminals may be tried upon the presentment of the prosecuting officer of any county, and the grand jury may not be called except under extraordinary circumstances. Fosness' bill repealing the horse thief bounty was passed with an amendment exempting pending claims. Mr. Littleton's bill allowing certain corporations to amend or renew their articles at special meetings was also passed. A resolution allowing the Mountain Iron committee to audit the bills for the necessary expenses of the investigation, was adopted. The house spent some time in committee of the whole but considered no bill except the depository bill.

Following bills were introduced:

To provide for the employment of court reporters for the district courts of the state.

Relating to interest on money and usury.

To amend chapter 170, General Laws of 1885, relating to the dissolution of independent school districts.

To preserve the public safety by regulating the sale, storage and delivery of benzine, gasoline or naptha.

There is no such thing as a natural distribution of wealth among mankind. Men distribute it to themselves according to the dictates of their own shrewdness, good luck, greed, industry, honesty or dishonesty.

The men find it hard to be satisfactory. Charley Hamble, of Holton, was killed because he refused to marry; Jacob Holton, of Hamble, was killed because he wanted to marry. This all happened in Pennsylvania.

Because a man is eminent in national politics, does that imply that the public is well-bred when it demands from the newspapers an account of his daughter's gowns or her love affairs? If another man offers to the public his best thoughts, hoping earnestly to help some struggling soul in life, and his work commands universal attention and respect, why should his clothes, his accent, his family, be dragged into public view to gratify a million curious eyes?

A gospel wagon, run by a gasoline engine, is the newest device for spreading the gospel in New York city. It will be in the harge of two Baptist clergymen and their wives, and will patrol every portion of the city. The vehicle will contain a regular pulpit, an organ and a choir. During the cold weather a large tank of coffee will be placed in the wagon, and when it is too cold to preach the clergymen will distribute coffee and tracts to those around the wagon.

A peculiar state of affairs exists in Dorchester county, Maryland, in reference to the public schools. One of the main sources of school revenue for many years has been from local oyster licenses. A recent change in the law requires one-third of this revenue to be paid into the state oyster fund, thereby diminishing the school fund to the tune of about $4,000 a year. The salaries of country teachers now range from $180 to $270 per year, the latter being for the best qualified teachers in charge of the largest and most advanced schools. The question of increased school revenues will be a potent factor in Maryland politics during the coming year.

A novel charity has been organized by Lazarus Morgenthau, an unostentatious philanthropist of New York. Its purpose is to provide dowries to worthy German orphan girls who marry worthy men. At present its fund is large enough to furnish every year sixteen dowries of one hundred dollars each, but the founder expects that in a few years the society will have a fund of one million dollars, sufficient to make a wedding present of one hundred dollars in gold, every year, to four hundred worthy but parentless German girls. No regard is to be paid to the creed of the orphan, who may be married by any religious ceremony she desires, provided she is first joined to her husband by a public civil ceremony. The society's board of directors will be composed of one hundred Jews and one hundred Christians. Already six orphan societies—one Protestant, two Roman Catholic and three Hebrew—have been asked to select suitable applicants for the society's wedding presents.

A Washington colored boy took a pair of old shoes, which he had just purchased, to the station house Tuesday, and said to the chief that there was something wrong with them, he having noticed some shining substance in the heel of one of them, which he discovered accidentally in removing a piece of loose leather. The boy was told to take the shoes to a shoemaker and have them examined. He did so, and the shoemaker found ensconced in the heel a "railroad torpedo." The matter was again reported to the police and they are investigating it.

Right living is, in one sense, a living without making mistakes. To make mistakes is human, however, and a mistake may at least have in it the merit of activity. The person who does nothing may escape blundering, but a do-nothing policy is not often a help to progress. "Recently," said a notable speaker at a memorable gathering lately assembled, "I saw some people who have made no mistakes for thousands of years; they were in the museum of the University of Pennsylvania, in the Peruvian and Mexican departments, in glass cases."

THE EARTH'S TEMPERATURE.

Some Observations Made in the Deepest Holes.

Physical geography teaches that the increase of temperature as we descend into the earth is about one degree Fahrenheit to every fifty-five feet descent. The following deep mines of the world show accurately the amount of this increase in the most notable instances: The deepest mine in the world is the Red Jacket shaft of the Calumet & Hecla mines, in the Lake Superior region, which has been sunk to a depth of 4,900 feet. The greatest depth in Great Britain is 3,474 feet; Belgium, 3,937 feet; Austria-Hungary, 3,672 feet; Victoria, 3,302 feet. In the Calumet & Hecla mines the increase of temperature is the least on record, being attributed to the presence of Lake Superior. On the other hand, the results of the Comstock are abnormally high, from the lode being heated by volcanic action and the presence of hot subterranean waters. The mean of a number of observations of the Red Jacket shaft gives an average of 60 feet per degree Fahrenheit. The deepest bore hole yet made was sunk by the Prussian government in 1893, and reached a depth of 6,572 feet, the increase being one degree Fahrenheit for 62.1 feet. In the Comstock mine it is so warm that sometimes it is impossible to work, due to the increased temperature, and ordinarily the men have to be changed very often, sometimes as often as once in twenty minutes.

Eating Dinner Backward.

An odd experiment with the kinetoscope took place not long ago in Boston. The subject was a man eating dinner, and the film, prepared especially for the occasion, was of unusual length, so that the whole performance could be recorded. The man entered the room, and, seating himself at a table, proceeded to cut up the food. The motion of the fork from the plate to his lips were carefully recorded until the last morsel of food had vanished. Then he arose and walked out of the room, leaving nothing on the table but bare dishes. The series of pictures was then reversed. It showed the man entering the room, walking backward. He sat dawn at the table, upon which there was nothing but bare dishes, and proceeded to extract food from his lips until he had filled the potato dish with potatoes and gradually put together a steak on the platter before him. Then he calmly backed out of the room, and the waiter did likewise with the meal that the man had apparently created.—Troy Times.

BLEW UP THE BANK

Hollidaysburg, Pa., Feb. 2.—An attempt was made to blow up the bank building lately occupied by the firm of Gardner, Morrow & Co., private bankers. On the opposite side of the street from where the explosion occurred, the front of the First National bank, Frank Glessner's store, the residences of Charles Vowinckle, Maj. S. S. Barr, Mrs. Elizabeth Christy and Dr. James D. Humes, Stiffler's milinery store and Goldman's clothing store were all damaged by the shock, every plate glass window in the store being demolished. The following bills were introduced:

To provide state aid for rural schools.

To amend the laws of 1894 relating to county agricultural associations and joint stock societies; providing for $12,000 state aid for such.

To regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors in counties; local option law.

The greater portion of the time in the house session was given over to the introduction of bills, twenty-one new measures, and some of them of more than ordinary importance, were proposed. Mr. Laybourn introduced a measure fixing the weight of a legal bushel of coal at eighty pounds. Mr. Bruslettan introduced a bill allowing villages of a population exceeding 1,000 to vote upon the question of the dissolution of the village corporations and of incorporation as cities from the same territory. Mr. Grondahl introduced a bill designing to give a legal status and protection to cycle paths. It provides that upon the petition of not less than fifteen persons, the county commissioners shall direct the county surveyor to make a survey of any desired cycle path, and his report and plat is made part of the county records. Mr. Head introduced a bill providing any elector who resides twenty miles from the polling place in his own election district may secure from the clerk of courts a certificate of that fact, and upon presentation of this certificate he may be allowed to vote at the polling place nearest his residence if in the same county. St. Paul, Jan. 29. — The Dunn-Day senatorial contest was called into active being in the senate by Senator Cole, who moved a reconsideration of the vote by which Frank A. Day's seat was declared vacant. Senator Cole voted with the majority in that memorable contest. He stated that there was serious doubts in the minds of many as to the effect of the vacation of Mr. Day's seat, to date from Jan. 31, 1895, would have on the legality of the Anderson land tax bill and other senate measures that became laws after that date. Debate followed during which it was shown that Senator Cole's motion was intended to pave the way for the introduction of a resolution in which the date of the vacancy of Day's seat will be left open.

President Gibbs then ruled that no motion would be entertained that carried with it the question of H. H. Dunn's right to the seat. Senator Cole asserted that no such intention attached to the resolution. In order to give the senators ample time to consider the matter, however, the motion was tabled for a day by a viva voce vote.

Senator Wyman introduced a resolution favoring the Anglo-American treaty, which, after much debate, was carried.

Among the important bills introduced were the following:

To provide for the establishment of another sub-experiment station.

Mr. Donnelly offerred a resolution calling on the state auditor for information as to the cost of printing the official state ballots and the amount of fees charged against candidates for office.

The calendar was taken up and three bills given their third reading and passed. They were Mr. Smith's bill exempting a typewriter from execution; the judiciary committee's bill allowing district courts to issue writs of replevin, and Mr. Schmidt's bill to legalize certain acknowledgments. Mr. Heimerdinger called up his resolution calling for a special committee of seven to prepare a bill reducing state, county and legislative salaries, and naming 20 per cent as about the proper average reduction. The resolution was amended by striking out the 20 per cent limitation and all reference as to where the knife should be laid. After considerable discussion the resolution was adopted as amended.

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—The senate put in a very busy day. What with general orders, taken up for the first time and flooded with bills released from the judiciary and other committees, any number of new bills, resolutions, etc., the senators had their hands full and an all-day session was the result. Several bills were passed. Among them and most important, just at present, was the board of pardons bill, over which was a lengthy debate in committee of the whole while it was being considered under the head of general orders. While pursuing its devious and somewhat perilous course through general orders it was quite severely amended by taking away from the board the authority to appoint a clerk at a salary and directing that the clerical work shall be done by the clerk of the supreme court without compensation. The following bills were passed:

To amend the laws relating to the organization of cemetery associations.

Joint memorial to congress relating to the classification of railway mail clerks.

To legalize the issuance of bonds for the city of Moorhead.

The following bills were introduced:

To provide for assistance in the office of public examiner.

To prohibit the desecration of Decoration day.

To provide compensation for county surveyors.

To reorganize the faculty of the state agricultural school and university.

To provide a constitutional amendment relative to the taxation of railroads.

To regulate the election of delegates to political conventions.

In the House.

The house devoted most of two sessions to the discussion of the arbitration treaty, pending before the United States senate. That is to say, the discussion was based upon resolutions expressive of legislative opinion as to the treaty, but during an hour and a quarter of the debate in the forenoon, occupied by Mr. Donnelly it wandered very wide of the mark. During the afternoon session something was said about the treaty, and the final result of it all was that the adoption of the senate resolution, favoring arbitration in general, but carefully and explicitly refraining from an indorsement of the treaty, with an amendment offered by Mr. Douglas, expressive of opposition to the treaty unless the Monroe doctrine was specifically guarded.

Mr. Feig, from the committee on towns and counties, reported favorably the following bills: To require townships to maintain guide posts; to reenact section 1, chapter 176, Laws of 1889, relating to towns; to repeal chapter 298, Laws of 1895, for the enlargement of organized counties.

Mr. McDonald, from the committee on state library, reported the bill for traveling libraries favorably. Mr. Littleton reported several bills from the committee on crimes and punishment. The McDonald bill, giving the police power to "vag" criminals of reputation was reported for indefinite postponement.

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—The senate calendar was taken up yesterday and ten bills were passed. Other useless measures have been killed, and the upper house is now in a fair way of acquitting itself commendably in the matter of rapid and careful legislation. The senate concurred in the house amendment to Senator Wyman's arbitration treaty resolution.

A communication was received from the governor stating that he had withdrawn the appointment of Knute Bondy on the state board of equalization.

Senator Potter introduced a bill to provide for the loaning of the permanent school and university funds to counties.

Senator Knatvoid introduced a bill to repeal the laws relating to bounties for the arrest of horse thieves.

The following bills were passed:

A bill relating to property exempt from taxation.

A bill relating to cemetery associations.

A bill for an act fixing the fees to be paid by applicants for certificates of declaration of intention to become citizens of the United States, and for certificates of full citizenship.

A bill in regard to the powers of the district court; may issue writs of certiarari.

A bill for an act to prevent the furnishing of impure water and prescribing punishment therefor.

The senate adjourned until 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

In the House.

The house spent the greater part of the day in committee of the whole considering bills, several of which were disposed of.

Mr. Hayter's bill proposing a constitutional amendment to make the governor ineligible for the office of United States senator excited the most general discussion. The committee of the whole recommended the bill for indefinite postponement and the house indorsed the action.

The following bills were introduced:

Relating to actions against co-partnerships.

Relating to limitations of appropriations to certain institutions.

To provide for the creation of a department of anthropology in the state university.

Relating to the renewal of judgments of the courts of this state.

Relating to the organization of annuity, safety deposit and trust companies.

To provide for further publicity as to the financial condition of banks doing business in this state.

St. Paul, Feb. 1.—In the house the speaker presented a communication from the governor transmitting the various reports on the question of the location of the new insane asylum. There were three reports, a majority report, a minority report and a supplemental majority report. A motion that the reports should be printed was adopted as was also a resolution calling on the governor for the minutes of the commission's meetings.

Mr. Feig's resolution opposing the bill now pending in congress for national grain inspection was adopted.

The following bills were introduced:

To provide for submission to the voters of each county, or any subdivision thereof, of the question of granting license for the sale of intoxicating liquors.

To compel the publication of the names and officers and stockholders of all banking institutions and the amount of stock held by each.

To provide for the immediate enforcement of the liability of the directors and stockholders of banking institutions for the benefit of creditors.

To amend section 1863, General Statutes of 1894, relating to obstruction of public highways.

To prevent fraudulent dealing in cider, wine, maple molasses or syrup, maple sugar, jellies, olive oil, buckwheat flour, the edible nuts, allspice, ginger, cinnamon, mace, cloves, black and red pepper and mustard.

To provide for the election of inspectors of mines by the people.

Giving liens on logs and other forest products for the better security of material men and others.

To encourage and promote immigration.

To provide for the recovery of legal expenses, brought by creditors of corporations to enforce the liability of its stockholders.

Regulating the fees of sheriffs on sale of land on execution.

To amend section 31, chapter 36, General Statutes 1878, relating to hiring teachers for public schools.

The house spent the remainder of the day in committee of the whole considering bills.

St. Paul, Feb. 2.—The house took up Mr. Schmidt's bill to provide for a board, consisting of the governor, auditor and public examiner, to select depositories for state funds, and spent most of the session wrangling over it. On the part of the opponents of the bill a good deal of the discussion wandered very far from the provisions of the bill, and they tried to read into the measure a number of things that did not belong there. Some of the country members seemed to think that it was intended as a blow at the country banks, and opposed it accordingly. When the bill was reached on general orders in committee of the whole, Mr. Anderson in the chair, Mr. Scott moved to refer the bill to the committee on banks and banking. This proposition finally prevailed, but not until a long discussion had occurred. Mr. Ferris offered an amendment, providing that at least 2 per cent interest should be paid. Mr. McDonald offered another amendment providing that at least three of the five bondsmen should not be officers or directors of the bank upon whose bond they became sureties.

Aside from the consideration of this question the session of the house was of a routine character. Mr. Olds presented a petition from the grand jury of Yellow Medicine county praying for a modification of our grand jury system, so that criminals may be tried upon the presentment of the prosecuting officer of any county, and the grand jury may not be called except under extraordinary circumstances. Fosness' bill repealing the horse thief bounty was passed with an amendment exempting pending claims. Mr. Littleton's bill allowing certain corporations to amend or renew their articles at special meetings was also passed. A resolution allowing the Mountain Iron committee to audit the bills for the necessary expenses of the investigation, was adopted. The house spent some time in committee of the whole but considered no bill except the depository bill.

Following bills were introduced:

To provide for the employment of court reporters for the district courts of the state.

Relating to interest on money and usury.

To amend chapter 170, General Laws of 1885, relating to the dissolution of independent school districts.

To preserve the public safety by regulating the sale, storage and delivery of benzine, gasoline or naptha.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Condensed Proceedings of the National Law Mill.

Washington, Jan. 28. — A crisis in the debate on the Nicaragua canal bill was reached in the senate. It brought out an energetic statement from Senator Sherman in which he foreshadowed a new treaty by which the United States could build the canal without the intermediation of a private concession. The senator declared that this governmental execution of the project was the only feasible one and that all private efforts in that direction had proved failures. Mr. Vilas followed with a motion to recommit the canal bill to the committee on foreign relations. The motion was changed so as to make the recommittal to the special committee of which Mr. Morgan is chairman. The senate adjourned before a vote was taken and the Vilas motion to recommit is pending. The military academy appropriation bill carrying approximately $479,000, was passed after the defeat of the amendment for participation of the West Point cadets in the inauguration ceremony.

The house, after a debate of four hours, adopted the conference report on the immigration bill by a vote of 131 to 118. The principal criticism of the measure agreed on by the conferees in debate was based upon the extension of the educational test to female as well as male immigrants on the ground that it might divide families and to the limitation to the ability of an immigrant to read and write the English language or the language of their native country or residence.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The open session of the senate was comparatively brief, as more than half the day was spen, behind closed doors. During the open session the bill for an international monetary conference was debated. Mr. Chandler speaking in favor of it and Mr. Stewart of Nevada against. Mr. Chandler's speech was in the nature of a statement of the attitude of the Republican side of the chamber on the bill. Mr. Stewart, although criticising the commission as futile, stated that he would not oppose the measure. The Nicaragua canal bill and the bankruptcy bill were before the senate for a brief time, but no progress was made on either of them. Early in the day a lively debate occurred over Mr. Allen's resolution questioning the president's right to foreclose against the Pacific railroads. The resolution went over for a speech by Mr. Thurston of Nebraska to-morrow.

The house passed the Indian appropriation bill and entered into the consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill, but all interest in these two measures were overshadowed by remarkable speeches, one made by Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio attacking ex-Gov. Altgeld of Illinois, and the other by Mr. Dearmond of Missouri, heaping ridicule on Secretary Morton for the recent issue of a pamphlet entitled the "Farmers' Interest in Finance." Among the bills passed was one to pension Mary A. Viel, widow of Maj. W. D. Sanger, Fifty-fifth Illinois infantry, at the rate of $25 per month.

A number of amendments to the Indian appropriation bill were made before it passed. The salaries and expenses of the Dawes commission were reduced from $50,000 to $43,000.

Washington, Jan. 30. — By the decisive vote of 46 to 4 the senate passed the bill for the appointment of commissioners to an international monetary conference. The closing of the debate brought out several closing speeches. During the day Mr. Morgan—failing to secure an agreement for a vote on the Nicaraguan canal bill—announced that it would be urged to conclusion Monday. The senate adjourned until Monday.

The house witnessed another exciting and somewhat sensational episode. At the end of an acrimonious debate on the conference report on the bill to confer the rights and franchises of the Atlantic & Pacific railroad on the purchasers under the mortgage foreclosure, Mr. Powers of Vermont and Mr. Burrett of Massachusetts exchanged broadsiders. The report was rejected by an overwhelming majority—71 to 143—and the conferees were instructed to insist on the house amendments.

Just before adjournment Mr. Hardy, Rep., Ind., who was refused unanimous consent to continue a political speech he was making, declared that he would retaliate by objecting to every request for unanimous consent for the remainder of the session.

The remainder of the day was spent in the discussion of the agricultural appropriation bill.

Washington, Feb. 1. — The senate committee on foreign relations has agreed to report favorably on the arbitration treaty with amendments. All but two of these amendments are merely verbal. One of the two which are essential strikes out the clause providing for the selection of King Oscar as umpire when one is considered necessary.

The other important amendment is an addition to article 1 of the treaty and reads as follows: "No question which affects the foreign or domestic policy of either of the contracting parties or the relations of either with any other state or power, by treaty or otherwise, shall be subject to arbitration under this treaty, except by special agreement." The amendment eliminating the umpire clause was agreed to by a vote of 9 to 1. The vote in opposition is understood to have been cast by Senator Gray of Delaware. The vote on the motion to report the treaty favorably as amended was 6 to 4.

An amendment declaring in explicit terms that the Alaskan boundary question should not be included in the agreement for arbitration, was voted down as being unnecessary. The chairman was instructed to ask the senate to give the treaty consideration at as early a day as practicable. It is expected that when taken up it will lead to a protracted and animated debate in executive session.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The Nicaragua canal bill occupied the attention of the senate most of the day but no progress was made toward a final vote. Mr. Morgan, in charge of the measure, sought to secure an agreement for a vote to-morrow or Thursday but the opponents of the measure, led by Mr. Vilas and Mr. Daniel, resisted any agreement. Shortly after the opening the senate went into executive session. The arbitration treaty was presented with amendments and briefly discussed. The senate ratified the Japanese treaty with reference to trade marks.

When the open session was resumed a resolution by Mr. Stewart (Pop., Nev.) was agreed to, requesting the secretary of the interior for information as to the progress of the survey in Alaska. Mr. Chandler (Rep., N. H.) offered a resolution directing the senate committee on privileges and elections to inquire into all the circumstances of the recent Delaware election. Another brief executive session was held and the senate adjourned.

The house had a busy day. An unusually large number of bills were passed but few of them were of any considerable importance. It was suspension day, and the usual obstructive tactics were unavailing.. About 4 p. m. the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was taken up and fair progress made before the hour of adjournment.

Washington, Feb. 3.—The feature of the senate was a very spirited debate on the conference report on the immigration bill. Mr. Gibson of Maryland opposed the report and Mr. Lodge defended it. After two hours' struggle the report went over and the Nicaragua canal bill was taken up. Mr. Vilas continuing his remarks. Mr. Teller of Colorado also entered in the debate in opposition to the measure. The bill was passed pensioning the surviving members of Gray's battalion of Arkansas volunteers.

The day in the house was very dull, the whole day being devoted to debate on appropriation bills. The diplomatic and consular bill was passed and considerable progress made with the District of Columbia bill. The bill as passed carries $1,673,708. Resolutions arranging for the formal canvassing of the electoral vote of the last presidential election on Wednesday, Feb. 10, were adopted.

Old Couple Burned.

Lima, Ohio, Feb. 3.—At North Baltimore Charles T. Russell, seventy years old, and his wife, sixty-five years old, were burned to death. They lived alone, and some time before midnight their house was discovered to be on fire. Russell managed to get out of the house but ran back after some money he had secreted and was overcome by the heat and cremated, his dead body with the charred money in his hand being found at the door. Mrs. Russell was in bed and was burned to a crisp.

REIGN OF TERROR.

Life and Liberty Very Uncertain Now at Constantinople.

Marseilles, Feb. 4. — Tewfik Pasha, until recently Turkish minister of foreign affairs, has arrived here. He states that a reign of terror prevails among the entourage of the sultan. He is fearful as to the fate of his family, whom he was compelled to leave behind him at Constantinople under the protection of the foreign embassies.

Lil Visits Mrs. Cleveland.

Washington, Feb. 3.—Ex-Queen Liliuokalani paid a visit to Mrs. Cleveland. She sent a note to Mrs. Cleveland asking the privilege of calling upon her. As she had been prevented from meeting Liliuokalani, by reason of her absence upon the occasion of her call upon the president last week, Mrs. Cleveland assented to the request. Accordingly the ex-queen came to the White House about 4:45, the hour being set by Mrs. Cleveland.

Extract of Horse.

Chicago, Feb. 3. — The medical profession is thoroughly aroused over the development that immense quantities of alleged extract of beef, put up in jars and with labels that are an exact fac simile of the French importation, but which is in reality made out of horseflesh almost in the heart of the city, has been put on the market during the past year.

Schools for Little Reds.

Chamberlain, S. D., Feb. 3.—Work on the new Indian schools at this place and Rapid City will be commenced as early in the spring as the weather will permit, the Indian bureau having just given notice that it is prepared to receive bids.

WILL FIGHT IN NEVADA.

Almost Certain That Corbett and Fitz Will Fight at Carson.

San Francisco, Jan. 29.—It is almost a foregone conclusion that the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight will take place in Nevada, and it is about equally certain that the ring will be pitched in Carson. Everything points to the verification of this dual prophecy.

No opposition to the measure was maintained in the upper house and the vast array of Nevadans who are favorable to the measure voice the opinion that it will go through without a struggle. The chief executive of the state has firmly declined to express an opinion as to how the matter striges him.

The Carson people are working like beavers with a view to securing the fight, and while Reno and Virginia City have claims to put forward, it is admitted on every side that Carson stands the best chance of capturing the contest.

VOTES AT $500 EACH.

Direct Charges of Venality Made at Olympia.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 29.—In an authorized statement Dr. G. V. Calhoun has charged certain members of the legislature with venality, as follows:

"Senator Plummer of Spokane, president pro tem. of the senate, offered to vote for Squire for $500. He made the offer to me. Senator A. D. Warner of Everett came to me and told me there was a poll of twenty members who were not committed to any senatorial candidate; that they would agree to vote for Squire for $1,000 down and a contingent fee of $5,000 if Squire was elected."

New Revenue Cutters.

Washington, Jan. 29. — Capt. Shoemaker, chief of the revenue cutter service, has completed plans and specifications for the two new cutters authorized to be built by the act of June 11, 1896. The vessels are to be 205 feet over all, with 32 feet beam, and will be of modern construction. It is the intention of Capt. Shoemaker to have them ready to go into commission on the great lages in the spring of 1898.

Dervishes Retreating.

Massowah, Jan. 29. — Advices from Agordal say that the dervishes, who are believed to be advancing on this place, have abandoned their fortified camp at Amideb and are retreating in the direction of Aimosa, pursued by the friendly natives. It is further announced that there are no dervishes in the vicinity of Masala.

Damaged by Fire.

Indianapolis, Jan. 30. — The north wing of the Denison hotel, one of the finest in Indianapolis, was damaged by fire to the extent of about $20,000. The fire had gained considerable headway before an alarm was sounded and the damage caused by water was greater than by fire.

LUXURIES FOR DOGS.

WHERE THEY ARE PETTED, NURSED AND CARED FOR.

Hospital and Sanitarium Combined—A Washington Doctor Who Gives the Beasts Turkish Baths and Performs Operations on Them.

SITUATED between Pierce's Mill road and Zoological park, upon the high bank which overlooks Rock creek, is the new canine infirmary recently opened by Dr. Cecil French, a professor of canine medicine in the veterinary department of Columbia university, says the Washington Post. This institution is a novel one and is an experiment in this section of the country. It is a combined boarding-house and hospital for all dogs fortunate enough to have friends who can afford to indulge them in this luxury.

The building is one story high, forty feet long and twenty feet wide. Through the center of it is a corridor extending the length of the building and opening on this corridor are twelve cozy rooms, five on each side and two at the north end. Each of these small rooms is fitted up with hardwood and is heated by hot-water pipes so adjusted that the heat may be shut off from one and maintained in others as desired. The rooms have a large window and a door opening to the "run" or playground, and a ventilator over the door opening on the corridor.

These rooms are divided into wards for the occupancy of dogs having contagious diseases, such as mange and distemper; for invalid dogs having ailments that are not contagious, including accidents, and for boarders, which are generally pets left there while the owner is out of the city. The arrangement of the wards is such that the animals suffering from contagious diseases are completely isolated from their canine brethren.

At the south end of the corridor the operating room is on one side and the dispensary on the other. This operating room is supplied with hot and cold water, a zinc-covered operating table so arranged that all blood and water is conveyed from it to the sewer by pipes. In this room Dr. French performs all of his surgical treatment, from the amputation of a leg to enterotomy. He recently had a notable case of the latter class.

A pet dachshund owned by Miss Dorothy Rockhill, daughter of the assistant secretary of state, recently while playing swallowed a peach stone that he had picked up along the street. His suffering became intense and it was feared that the animal would have to be shot. Miss Rockhill was greatly attached to the little pet, which, because of his mischievous nature, was called "Sin," and before consenting to his being killed she consulted Dr. French. The animal was taken to the infirmary and the difficult operation of enterotomy was successfully performed and now "Sin" is as lively in the house of the assistant secretary of state as ever.

Pet dogs suffer much from toothache and the extraction of the offending teeth is a daily occurrence at the infirmary. A few days ago a well-known society lady took her little pet King Charles spaniel to the infirmary for treatment. The dog was blanketed and carried in her arms as she left her carriage and walked to the building. The owner appeared to be greatly distressed over the suffering of the dog and she begged Dr. French to cure it. An examination showed that the animal had toothache and when informed that the offending tooth could easily be extracted the society lady cried:

"Oh, no, doctor, not for the world. He would be a sight with a front tooth gone. Can't you fill it?"

Dr. French had never filled a tooth and is not a dentist, but he knew how the work should be done and he replied:

"Certainly, madam; leave the spaniel with me for three days and I will have him all right."

The society lady departed in her carriage and Dr. French an hour later was in the office of a dentist. After a consultation the doctor returned to the infirmary and the dentist accompanied him. The animal was placed on the operating table, put under the influence of an anesthetic, and while Dr. French watched the pulse the dentist burred out the cavity, and in an hour had placed a gold filling in the tooth, a filling which glistened in the sunlight as perfectly as if it had been in the incisor of a human being. When the owner of the dog called for him she was delighted with the work and the fee she left was proportionate with her delight.

Attached to the infirmary is a bathroom, where the dogs receive a shampoo and shower bath as often as required. Dr. French has had plans drawn for a Turkish bath for these pets, which he will build in the spring. He is also having an ambulance built which will be about the size of an ordinary delivery wagon, but will be cushioned and arranged for the purpose it will be put to.

Worth Seeing.

An amusing instance of the workings of an inquiring mind is given by Mr. Frederick Crowest in his "Musical Anecdotes." The company of one of the opera houses, at the close of a London season, had arrived at Liverpool to embark for a continental tour. The musical instruments were being shipped with the rest, and among them was the double bass, or "big fiddle," as it is also called, not cased as usual, for this member of the string family will stand a little rough treatment. It soon attracted the attention of the Jack Tars, three or four of whom settled round, scrutinizing it with keen interest. By the order of an officer they soon dispersed, but not long afterward another bluff seaman was discovered secretly watching it with wondering eyes. He was asked his reason for standing thus idle.

"Well, yer know," said Jack, "I'm just waiting for to see the length of the bloke's arm that can play that there fiddle!"

Mysteries of Helium.

As further experiments are carried with the new gas called helium—which was recognized in the sun before it had been found on the earth—the more remarkable it appears. Many chemists believe it consists of two gases, yet they have not been able satisfactorily to divide it. Professor Ramsay, one of its discoverers, has failed in every attempt to make it enter into a chemical combination; Lord Rayleigh has found that it possesses by far the lowest refractivity ever observed in any gas, and surprise is expressed at the astonishing distances traversed by electric sparks in darting through helium.

Adventures of a Man in a Big Dry-Goods Store.

"I'm just going into Blank's for a minute for a veil."

"Hump! well. I'll step across the street into the saloon to get my boots blacked."

"All right, dear; and if you should get your—er—your boots blacked within a minute or two come to the lace department to find me."

The bootblacking operation occupied a couple of minutes, observes the New York World, and the husband plunged through the constantly swinging doors of the store into the arms of a floor-walker.

"What can we do for you this morning, sir?"

"I want to find my wife."

The floor-walker looked puzzled.

"She's in the lace department."

"Oh, yes, sir; elevator to second floor, cross the main hall, through the shoe department, then up one short flight into the annex."

It took him ten minutes to get there and when he did his wife was gone. He was directed to turn to the waiting-room, the lost property room, the information bureau, and, finally, after more than half an hour's search, he found her in the restaurant with a cup of chocolate and an evening newspaper.

"Oh, here you are. What a time it took you to get your shine! Now, before we go to the steamship office, I want to go for a minute to the book department——"

"You'll come with me this very minute," he said, "or Aunt Lou may swim to England for all I care."

She went.

THE CARRIER PIGEON.

An Explorer's Wife Cheered by the Message That It Brought.

One day a wonderful bird tapped at the window of Mrs. Nansen's house at Christiania. Instantly the window was opened and the wife of the famous arctic explorer in another moment covered the little messenger with kisses and caresses, says the Philadelphia Times. The carrier pigeon had been away from the cottage thirty long months, but it had not forgotten the way home. It brought a note from Nansen stating that all was going on well with him and his expedition in the polar regions. Nansen had fastened a message to a carrier pigeon and turned the bird loose. The frail courier darted out into the blizzardly air. It flew like an arrow over a thousand miles of frozen waste and then sped forward over another thousand miles of ocean and plains and forests, and one morning entered the window of the waiting mistress and delivered the message which she had been awaiting so anxiously. We boast of human pluck, sagacity and endurance, but this little carrier pigeon, in its homeward flight, after an absence of thirty months, accomplished a feat so wonderful that we can only give ourselves up to the amazement and admiration which must overwhelm every one when the marvelous story is told. Mrs. Nansen's pigeon is one of the wonders of the world.

The Mexican Army.

The Mexican army is mainly composed of recruits forced into its ranks from the jails. A prisoner is released from confinement on condition that he enlists in the army; thus the cost of keeping him in jail at the expense of the state is avoided, and frequently a man is sentenced to enlistment without ever being sent to jail, with the same economical end in view. This method of recruiting the army prevails to a greater or less extent all through Mexico and is more particularly the rule in the province of Sonora, where not infrequently a whole regiment, barring the non-commissioned and commissioned officers, is composed of criminals. With a regiment so recruited it is not surprising that there are many desertions, and that esprit de corps is entirely lacking.

TURNS HIM OVER.

Machine That Shifts an Old Man in His Bed.

The San Francisco Examiner tells about a man who has invented an apparatus to turn him over in bed. The man is Walter Hyde. He lives in Alameda, Cal. Mr. Hyde is quite old and is troubled with an incomplete circulation of the blood, causing sleeplessness. If he remains in one position long a mild form of paralysis follows and he cannot sleep at all. Mr. Hyde concluded that if he had some mechanical means to turn himself over hourly at night he could go to sleep and not be under the necessity of awakening. Being somewhat of a mechanical turn of mind, Mr. Hyde concluded to experiment. The result of his tinkering and thinking is the mechanical contrivance which hourly turns over without awakening him from his slumbers and which he says works so charmingly that his paralysis with accompanying sleeplessness is a thing of the past. The frame on which the mattress rests hangs from the bedstead by means of pinions, one at the head and the other at the foot. The frame is kept in position by being secured at the sides to a clock-like apparatus with cogs and levers to tilt the mattress frame, the motion of the rocking being governed by the clock and spring apparatus. The tilting of the frame is so nicely graduated that the sleeper is unconscious of the change but continues undisturbed in his night's sleep, as the mechanism attached to the frame automatically changes his position during the hour to the right or the left side as the case may be.

BADLY FRIGHTENED.

The Stranger Was Not a Dick Turpin—Just Wanted to Ask a Question.

Had I been a woman I would have screamed at the top of my voice. But being only a man I gulped down the lump that swelled up in my throat and treated myself to an imitation of bravery, says a writer in the Detroit Journal. Just as I had entered the shade that hangs like a pall about the church on Bagley and Park a figure loomed up before me indistinctly silhoutted against the gray stones of the edifice. It was a man. He quickly withdrew a hand from his coat pocket and, pointing his index finger straight at me, muttered in a hoarse voice: "Stand a moment."

I could see no gleam in his eye, but I imagined that his extended finger was the barrel of a revolver and I thought I saw that gleam. I stood. I confess that my knees knocked together and a cold perspiration began to ooze out of my anatomy.

"Say," he said, after eyeing me for a moment, "you needn't be afraid of me."

But I was. I thought he had evil designs on me. The darkness of the place suggested a repetition of several things that Dick Turpin made a business of. I was not in conversational frame at the moment, chiefly because I was trying to masticate the lump in my throat and get it to go down.

"Say," he repeated, "you needn't be afraid of me. I'm no thug. All I wanted to ask you is if this is the Grand Circus or Belle Isle."

TOP OF MONT BLANC.

An Observatory Is Now Being Built There.

The Philadelphia Times has been investigating the subject of observatories on mountain tops, and in a recent issue printed a long story from its Paris correspondent about the observatory now being built on the apex of Mount Blanc by M. Janssen, says the New York World. The Times prints a picture showing how the material for the structure was carried up the precipitous monutain by guides, each of whom was able to convey about fifty pounds at a trip. Some years ago another Frenchman, M. Vallot, constructed an observatory on a rock within about 1,400 feet of the top. M. Vallot had tried to build one higher up, but could find no suitable location for the structure. Ice and snow do not offer advantages for the foundation of a house, especially when it will be subjected to the heavy winds that shriek around the summit of a mountain. M. Janssen, however, expects to succeed and hopes to have his observatory completed next fall. The Times gives the following figures showing the altitudes at which observatories have been established: Arequipa (Charchani) Peru, 16,650 feet high; Janssen's Mont Blanc, France, 15,776 feet high; Pike's peak, Colorado, 15,208 feet high; Monta Rosa, Italy, 14,956 feet high; Vallot's, Mont Blanc, France, 14,320.

Walt Whitman the Man.

In a recently published book, entitled "Walt Whitman, the Man," Mr. Thomas Donaldson deals almost wholly with the personality of the Good Gray Poet, and completely shatters the belief held by many that he was a moral and literary outlaw, reeking with the atmosphere of the beer cellar, feeding on the adulation of his admirers, and ready to accept their charity on all occasions. Says his biographer: "I knew him when he was capable of evil, had he desired to be or do evil, and in all that period I found him to be a man of honor; just, brave and simple in all worldly thought and action. He loved humanity, while holding himself aloof from close contact with it. Suffering appealed to him. Sickness invoked his aid. He regarded poverty as a dispensation of nature, and never turned the cold shoulder to its appeals. He did not claim that the world owed him a living, but only asked that it permit him to make one for himself. To this end—in health he worked, and when out of health he worked. Distinctly and emphatically he was not a mendicant, a beggar, a loafer or a useless mouth. He was at work always, even when work to him was mental and physical torture."

A Child and the Letters.

An ingenious person named Krohn, whose patience is evidently more highly developed than his sense of humor, has been making some experiments that are supposed to be very important to scientific teachers. He has found that it takes a young child 364-1000 of a second to recognize the letter c, 358-1000 of a second to recognize the letter t; while the word c-a-t as a whole is recognized in 339-1000 of a second. Therefore, he says, primary teaching should be done by words and not by letters, and the letters should be 1-12 of an inch high and printed in a line not more than four inches long. We don't know exactly how he has discovered all these things, but that does not matter, for he is evidently a very profound person. We have done some figuring ourselves on the basis of his researches and we find that, following out his method and adopting his kind of a reading book, a child of 5 years in an average daily lesson would each day save 9789-10000 of a minute out of its valuable time. Think of that!—The Bookman.

PURIFYING DRINKING WATER.

Storing It Away the Best Way of Filtering.

It is well known that alum will remove organic and other matters from water so as to render it clear and pure; but it is now said that fluoride is superior to alum for this purpose, says Mechan's Monthly. One ounce of fluoride is used to every 1,000 gallons of water. After all, the best kind of purifier is nature's own. The minute organisms known as bacteria are the chief causes of the impurity of drinking water. These invisible creatures have to live as well as their larger brethren, and they must eat to live. As soon as they have eaten all in the water that there is to feed on they die. Dr. Frankland has recently stated, from his recent examination of water stored for two weeks, that it seems as pure and free from bacteria life as if it had passed through the best of filters, but it seems strange that this should have so recently come under Dr. Frankland's experience. Everyone knows that there is no purer or better water in the world than that which is supplied to seafaring people. Almost any kind of water stored away in a ship's tank becomes absolutely pure after the vessel has been a few weeks at sea. This is usually ascribed in popular language to fermentation, but there is really nothing to ferment: it is simply that the bacteria have eaten everything in the water there is to eat and then died of starvation.

Shoes with Stoves in Them.

An effective means of warming the feet has been patented in Germany. The inventor calls it "heatable shoes." Within the heel of the shoe, which is hollowed out, there is a receptacle for a glowing substance, similar to that used in the Japanese hand-warmers. Between the soles, imbedded in asbestos covers, is a rubber bag, which is filled with water. The water is heated, and as it circulates while the wearer of the shoe is walking, it keeps the surface of the foot warm. A small safety valve is provided so that the bag cannot burst. The warmth given by this sole never rises above 70 degrees Fahrenheit, and will last about eight hours. The sole is slightly thicker than that of a wet-weather boot.

Cities and Morals.

This shifting of the population from the country to the towns is accompanied by a profound change in the habits, thought and mode of life of a large portion of the population. The wits are sharpened and the moral sense is dulled by the excitement and variety of city life. There is a feverish activity arising from the struggle of so many human beings in such keen competition and such close contact with each other. The crowding of the population increases with the value of real estate and the injury to health and morals increases in the same ratio.—Scribner's.

MISSIONS.

Reports from various cities indicate that the charitable work of the order of Deaconesses is reaping splendid results for the Master.

It is estimated that Union Congregational church, Boston, has given $200,000 to foreign missions and $300,000 to home missions and other charities during the seventy-four years of its existence.

Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, of the Volunteers of America, has just completed a week of excellent work among the churches of Chicago in the interest of that class of mission work which she so ably represents.

A novel series of religious services for employes of the Union Traction company was inaugurated by the Sunday Breakfast association at the depot, Fifteenth and Cumberland streets, Philadelphia. President Bean conducted the exercises and an address was made by Rev. Leonard Weaver.

The Chicago Training School for Missions, located at 4949 Indiana avenue, has received the unconditional gift of deeds to property in that city valued at $8,000 to $10,000. The attention of the public is being more and more drawn to this institution, which is putting hundreds of workers into the mission fields of this and other countries. An endowment fund of $100,000 is now greatly needed.

NATURE AND SCIENCE.

The muscles of the mocking bird's larynx are larger in proportion to the size of the bird than those of any other creature.

Recent experiments at the Boston University Medical school show that the X-ray will produce sensation on the cells of the cortex of the brain directly, and without mediation of the nerve filaments, or in other words that the blind may be able to see by training in mental perception.

Dr. Jagadis Chunder Bose, professor of physical science in London, claims a discovery more wonderful than the X-ray, and by which it is possible to flash electric currents through mountains, and ring bells and fire guns many thousand feet away without the use of wires. Prof. Bose says this new ray will do away with dangers caused by fogs, as it will penetrate the thickest fog—in fact, there is nothing it cannot pierce.

In so dry a region as central Australia frogs are found in fair numbers, creeks and claypans "swarming" with them. As the waters dry up the frogs disappear in their burrows, remaining till the rains come again. "Certain species of them," says Spencer, "gorge themselves with water before they go into their retreats, and in times of drought the natives dig them out and obtain enough water from their bodies to satisfy their thirst.

The whole subject of the methods by which seeds are distributed is attracting considerable attention just now. It seems almost impossible to construct any general law by which to explain the reason for things in nature. It does seem, for instance, safe to say that wings are given to seeds to enable them to fly far away from the parent tree, and thus extend the area of territory occupied by the species. But in many of the large-seeded pines—the linden and others—the hollow seeds only are the ones blown away. The solid, perfect seeds remain around the parent tree. The objectors to everything argue that wings are given to fan out light, useless material. But this surely cannot always be.

Every man knows of a position superior to his own that he could fill much better than the incumbent.—Puck.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Condensed Proceedings of the National Law Mill.

Washington, Jan. 28. – A crisis in the debate on the Nicaragua canal bill was reached in the senate. It brought out an energetic statement from Senator Sherman in which he foreshadowed a new treaty by which the United States could build the canal without the intermediation of a private concession. The senator declared that this governmental execution of the project was the only feasible one and that all private efforts in that direction had proved failures. Mr. Vilas followed with a motion to recommit the canal bill to the committee on foreign relations. The motion was changed so as to make the recommittal to the special committee of which Mr. Morgan is chairman. The senate adjourned before a vote was taken and the Vilas motion to recommit is pending. The military academy appropriation bill carrying approximately $479,000, was passed after the defeat of the amendment for participation of the West Point cadets in the inauguration ceremony.

The house, after a debate of four hours, adopted the conference report on the immigration bill by a vote of 131 to 118. The principal criticism of the measure agreed on by the conferees in debate was based upon the extension of the educational test to female as well as male immigrants on the ground that it might divide families and to the limitation to the ability of an immigrant to read and write the English language or the language of their native country or residence.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The open session of the senate was comparatively brief, as more than half the day was spent behind closed doors. During the open session the bill for an international monetary conference was debated. Mr. Chandler speaking in favor of it and Mr. Stewart of Nevada against. Mr. Chandler's speech was in the nature of a statement of the attitude of the Republican side of the chamber on the bill. Mr. Stewart, although criticising the commission as futile, stated that he would not oppose the measure. The Nicaragua canal bill and the bankruptcy bill were before the senate for a brief time, but no progress was made on either of them. Early in the day a lively debate occurred over Mr. Allen's resolution questioning the president's right to foreclose against the Pacific railroads. The resolution went over for a speech by Mr. Thurston of Nebraska to-morrow.

The house passed the Indian appropriation bill and entered into the consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill, but all interest in these two measures were overshadowed by remarkable speeches, one made by Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio attacking ex-Gov. Altgeld of Illinois, and the other by Mr. Dearmond of Missouri, heaping ridicule on Secretary Morton for the recent issue of a pamphlet entitled the "Farmers' Interest in Finance." Among the bills passed was one to pension Mary A. Viel, widow of Maj. W. D. Sanger, Fifty-fifth Illinois infantry, at the rate of $25 per month.

A number of amendments to the Indian appropriation bill were made before it passed. The salaries and expenses of the Dawes commission were reduced from $50,000 to $43,000.

Washington, Jan. 30. – By the decisive vote of 46 to 4 the senate passed the bill for the appointment of commissioners to an international monetary conference. The closing of the debate brought out several closing speeches. During the day Mr. Morgan —failing to secure an agreement for a vote on the Nicaraguan canal bill—announced that it would be urged to conclusion Monday. The senate adjourned until Monday.

The house witnessed another exciting and somewhat sensational episode. At the end of an acrimonious debate on the conference report on the bill to confer the rights and franchises of the Atlantic & Pacific railroad on the purchasers under the mortgage foreclosure, Mr. Powers of Vermont and Mr. Burrett of Massachusetts exchanged broadsiders. The report was rejected by an overwhelming majority —71 to 143—and the conferees were instructed to insist on the house amendments.

Just before adjournment Mr. Hardy, Rep., Ind., who was refused unanimous consent to continue a political speech he was making, declared that he would retaliate by objecting to every request for unanimous consent for the remainder of the session.

The remainder of the day was spent in the discussion of the agricultural appropriation bill.

Washington, Feb. 1. – The senate committee on foreign relations has agreed to report favorably on the arbitration treaty with amendments. All but two of these amendments are merely verbal. One of the two which are essential strikes out the clause providing for the selection of King Oscar as umpire when one is considered necessary.

The other important amendment is an addition to article 1 of the treaty and reads as follows: "No question which affects the foreign or domestic policy of either of the contracting parties or the relations of either with any other state or power, by treaty or otherwise, shall be subject to arbitration under this treaty, except by special agreement." The amendment eliminating the umpire clause was agreed to by a vote of 9 to 1. The vote in opposition is understood to have been cast by Senator Gray of Delaware. The vote on the motion to report the treaty favorably as amended was 6 to 4.

An amendment declaring in explicit terms that the Alaskan boundary question should not be included in the agreement for arbitration, was voted down as being unnecessary. The chairman was instructed to ask the senate to give the treaty consideration at as early a day as practicable. It is expected that when taken up it will lead to a protracted and animated debate in executive session.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The Nicaragua canal bill occupied the attention of the senate most of the day but no progress was made toward a final vote. Mr. Morgan, in charge of the measure, sought to secure an agreement for a vote to-morrow or Thursday but the opponents of the measure, led by Mr. Vilas and Mr. Daniel, resisted any agreement. Shortly after the opening the senate went into executive session. The arbitration treaty was presented with amendments and briefly discussed. The senate ratified the Japanese treaty with reference to trade marks.

When the open session was resumed a resolution by Mr. Stewart (Pop., Nev.) was agreed to, requesting the secretary of the interior for information as to the progress of the survey in Alaska. Mr. Chandler (Rep., N. H.) offered a resolution directing the senate committee on privileges and elections to inquire into all the circumstances of the recent Delaware election. Another brief executive session was held and the senate adjourned.

The house had a busy day. An unusually large number of bills were passed but few of them were of any considerable importance. It was suspension day, and the usual obstructive tactics were unavailing. About 4 p. m. the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was taken up and fair progress made before the hour of adjournment.

Washington, Feb. 3.—The feature of the senate was a very spirited debate on the conference report on the immigration bill. Mr. Gibson of Maryland opposed the report and Mr. Lodge defended it. After two hours' struggle the report went over and the Nicaragua canal bill was taken up, Mr. Vilas continuing his remarks. Mr. Teller of Colorado also entered in the debate in opposition to the measure. The bill was passed pensioning the surviving members of Gray's battalion of Arkansas volunteers.

The day in the house was very dull, the whole day being devoted to debate on appropriation bills. The diplomatic and consular bill was passed and considerable progress made with the District of Columbia bill. The bill as passed carries $1,673,708. Resolutions arranging for the formal canvassing of the electoral vote of the last presidential election on Wednesday, Feb. 10, were adopted.

WILL FIGHT IN NEVADA.

Almost Certain That Corbett and Fitz Will Fight at Carson.

San Francisco, Jan. 29.—It is almost a foregone conclusion that the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight will take place in Nevada, and it is about equally certain that the ring will be pitched in Carson. Everything points to the verification of this dual prophecy.

No opposition to the measure was maintained in the upper house and the vast array of Nevadans who are favorable to the measure voice the opinion that it will go through without a struggle. The chief executive of the state has firmly declined to express an opinion as to how the matter striges him.

The Carson people are working like beavers with a view to securing the fight, and while Reno and Virginia City have claims to put forward, it is admitted on every side that Carson stands the best chance of capturing the contest.

LUXURIES FOR DOGS.

WHERE THEY ARE PETTED, NURSED AND CARED FOR.

Hospital and Sanitarium Combined—A Washington Doctor Who Gives the Beasts Turkish Baths and Performs Operations on Them.

SITUATED between Pierce's Mill road and Zoological park, upon the high bank which overlooks Rock creek, is the new canine infirmary recently opened by Dr. Cecil French, a professor of canine medicine in the veterinary department of Columbia university, says the Washington Post. This institution is a novel one and is an experiment in this section of the country. It is a combined boarding-house and hospital for all dogs fortunate enough to have friends who can afford to indulge them in this luxury.

The building is one story high, forty feet long and twenty feet wide. Through the center of it is a corridor extending the length of the building and opening on this corridor are twelve cozy rooms, five on each side and two at the north end. Each of these small rooms is fitted up with hardwood and is heated by hot-water pipes so adjusted that the heat may be shut off from one and maintained in others as desired. The rooms have a large window and a door opening to the "run" or playground, and a ventilator over the door opening on the corridor.

These rooms are divided into wards for the occupancy of dogs having contagious diseases, such as mange and distemper; for invalid dogs having ailments that are not contagious, including accidents, and for boarders, which are generally pets left there while the owner is out of the city. The arrangement of the wards is such that the animals suffering from contagious diseases are completely isolated from their canine brethren.

At the south end of the corridor the operating room is on one side and the dispensary on the other. This operating room is supplied with hot and cold water, a zinc-covered operating table so arranged that all blood and water is conveyed from it to the sewer by pipes. In this room Dr. French performs all of his surgical treatment, from the amputation of a leg to enterotomy. He recently had a notable case of the latter class.

A pet dachshund owned by Miss Dorothy Rockhill, daughter of the assistant secretary of state, recently while playing swallowed a peach stone that he had picked up along the street. His suffering became intense and it was feared that the animal would have to be shot. Miss Rockhill was greatly attached to the little pet, which, because of his mischievous nature, was called "Sin," and before consenting to his being killed she consulted Dr. French. The animal was taken to the infirmary and the difficult operation of enterotomy was successfully performed and now "Sin" is as lively in the house of the assistant secretary of state as ever.

Pet dogs suffer much from toothache and the extraction of the offending teeth is a daily occurrence at the infirmary. A few days ago a well-known society lady took her little pet King Charles spaniel to the infirmary for treatment. The dog was blanketed and carried in her arms as she left her carriage and walked to the building. The owner appeared to be greatly distressed over the suffering of the dog and she begged Dr. French to cure it. An examination showed that the animal had toothache and when informed that the offending tooth could easily be extracted the society lady cried:

"Oh, no, doctor, not for the world. He would be a sight with a front tooth gone. Can't you fill it?"

Dr. French had never filled a tooth and is not a dentist, but he knew how the work should be done and he replied:

"Certainly, madam; leave the spaniel with me for three days and I will have him all right."

The society lady departed in her carriage and Dr. French an hour later was in the office of a dentist. After a consultation the doctor returned to the infirmary and the dentist accompanied him. The animal was placed on the operating table, put under the influence of an anesthetic, and while Dr. French watched the pulse the dentist burred out the cavity, and in an hour had placed a gold filling in the tooth, a filling which glistened in the sunlight as perfectly as if it had been in the incisor of a human being. When the owner of the dog called for him she was delighted with the work and the fee she left was proportionate with her delight.

Attached to the infirmary is a bathroom, where the dogs receive a shampoo and shower bath as often as required. Dr. French has had plans drawn for a Turkish bath for these pets, which he will build in the spring. He is also having an ambulance built which will be about the size of an ordinary delivery wagon, but will be cushioned and arranged for the purpose it will be put to.

Worth Seeing.

An amusing instance of the workings of an inquiring mind is given by Mr. Frederick Crowest in his "Musical Anecdotes." The company of one of the opera houses, at the close of a London season, had arrived at Liverpool to embark for a continental tour. The musical instruments were being shipped with the rest, and among them was the double bass, or "big fiddle," as it is also called, not cased as usual, for this member of the string family will stand a little rough treatment. It soon attracted the attention of the Jack Tars, three or four of whom settled round, scrutinizing it with keen interest. By the order of an officer they soon dispersed, but not long afterward another bluff seaman was discovered secretly watching it with wondering eyes. He was asked his reason for standing thus idle.

"Well, yer know," said Jack, "I'm just waiting for to see the length of the bloke's arm that can play that there fiddle!"

Mysteries of Helium.

As further experiments are carried with the new gas called helium—which was recognized in the sun before it had been found on the earth—the more remarkable it appears. Many chemists believe it consists of two gases, yet they have not been able satisfactorily to divide it. Professor Ramsay, one of its discoverers, has failed in every attempt to make it enter into a chemical combination; Lord Rayleigh has found that it possesses by far the lowest refractivity ever observed in any gas, and surprise is expressed at the astonishing distances traversed by electric sparks in darting through helium.

HE LOST HIS WIFE.

Adventures of a Man in a Big Dry-Goods Store.

"I'm just going into Blank's for a minute for a veil."

"Hump! well. I'll step across the street into the saloon to get my boots blacked."

"All right, dear; and if you should get your—er—your boots blacked within a minute or two come to the lace department to find me."

The bootblacking operation occupied a couple of minutes, observes the New York World, and the husband plunged through the constantly swinging doors of the store into the arms of a floor-walker.

"What can we do for you this morning, sir?"

"I want to find my wife."

The floor-walker looked puzzled.

"She's in the lace department."

"Oh, yes, sir; elevator to second floor, cross the main hall, through the shoe department, then up one short flight into the annex."

It took him ten minutes to get there and when he did his wife was gone. He was directed to turn to the waiting-room, the lost property room, the information bureau, and, finally, after more than half an hour's search, he found her in the restaurant with a cup of chocolate and an evening newspaper.

"Oh, here you are. What a time it took you to get your shine! Now, before we go to the steamship office, I want to go for a minute to the book department——"

"You'll come with me this very minute," he said, "or Aunt Lou may swim to England for all I care."

She went.

THE CARRIER PIGEON.

An Explorer's Wife Cheered by the Message That It Brought.

One day a wonderful bird tapped at the window of Mrs. Nansen's house at Christiania. Instantly the window was opened and the wife of the famous arctic explorer in another moment covered the little messenger with kisses and caresses, says the Philadelphia Times. The carrier pigeon had been away from the cottage thirty long months, but it had not forgotten the way home. It brought a note from Nansen stating that all was going on well with him and his expedition in the polar regions. Nansen had fastened a message to a carrier pigeon and turned the bird loose. The frail courier darted out into the blizzardly air. It flew like an arrow over a thousand miles of frozen waste and then sped forward over another thousand miles of ocean and plains and forests, and one morning entered the window of the waiting mistress and delivered the message which she had been awaiting so anxiously. We boast of human pluck, sagacity and endurance, but this little carrier pigeon, in its homeward flight, after an absence of thirty months, accomplished a feat so wonderful that we can only give ourselves up to the amazement and admiration which must overwhelm every one when the marvelous story is told. Mrs. Nansen's pigeon is one of the wonders of the world.

The Mexican Army.

The Mexican army is mainly composed of recruits forced into its ranks from the jails. A prisoner is released from confinement on condition that he enlists in the army; thus the cost of keeping him in jail at the expense of the state is avoided, and frequently a man is sentenced to enlistment without ever being sent to jail, with the same economical end in view. This method of recruiting the army prevails to a greater or less extent all through Mexico and is more particularly the rule in the province of Sonora, where not infrequently a whole regiment, barring the non-commissioned and commissioned officers, is composed of criminals. With a regiment so recruited it is not surprising that there are many desertions, and that esprit de corps is entirely lacking.

FOUND IN NATURE.

The timber wealth of the United States gives a yearly product of over $1,000,000,000, or more than twice the value of the output of the mines.

The leaf of the coccanut tree is nearly thirty feet long. A single leaf of the parasol magnolia of Ceylon affords shelter for from fifteen to twenty persons.

The lightest known wood is that of the anona palustris of Brazil, which is much lighter than cork. The heaviest is the iron bark of Australia, which weighs nearly 100 pounds to the cubic foot.

The river Tinto, in Spain, possesses extraordinary qualities. It hardens and petrifies the sand of its bed and if a stone falls in the stream upon another in a few months the two will be solidified together.

TURNS HIM OVER.

Machine That Shifts an Old Man in His Bed.

The San Francisco Examiner tells about a man who has invented an apparatus to turn him over in bed. The man is Walter Hyde. He lives in Alameda, Cal. Mr. Hyde is quite old and is troubled with an incomplete circulation of the blood, causing sleeplessness. If he remains in one position long a mild form of paralysis follows and he cannot sleep at all. Mr. Hyde concluded that if he had some mechanical means to turn himself over hourly at night he could go to sleep and not be under the necessity of awakening. Being somewhat of a mechanical turn of mind, Mr. Hyde concluded to experiment. The result of his tinkering and thinking is the mechanical contrivance which hourly turns over without awakening him from his slumbers and which he says works so charmingly that his paralysis with accompanying sleeplessness is a thing of the past. The frame on which the mattress rests hangs from the bedstead by means of pinions, one at the head and the other at the foot. The frame is kept in position by being secured at the sides to a clock-like apparatus with cogs and levers to tilt the mattress frame, the motion of the rocking being governed by the clock and spring apparatus. The tilting of the frame is so nicely graduated that the sleeper is unconscious of the change but continues undisturbed in his night's sleep, as the mechanism attached to the frame automatically changes his position during the hour to the right or the left side as the case may be.

BADLY FRIGHTENED.

The Stranger Was Not a Dick Turpin—Just Wanted to Ask a Question.

Had I been a woman I would have screamed at the top of my voice. But being only a man I gulped down the lump that swelled up in my throat and treated myself to an imitation of bravery, says a writer in the Detroit Journal. Just as I had entered the shade that hangs like a pall about the church on Bagley and Park a figure loomed up before me indistinctly silhoutted against the gray stones of the edifice. It was a man. He quickly withdrew a hand from his coat pocket and, pointing his index finger straight at me, muttered in a hoarse voice: "Stand a moment."

I could see no gleam in his eye, but I imagined that his extended finger was the barrel of a revolver and I thought I saw that gleam. I stood. I confess that my knees knocked together and a cold perspiration began to ooze out of my anatomy.

"Say," he said, after eyeing me for a moment, "you needn't be afraid of me."

But I was. I thought he had evil designs on me. The darkness of the place suggested a repetition of several things that Dick Turpin made a business of. I was not in conversational frame at the moment, chiefly because I was trying to masticate the lump in my throat and get it to go down.

"Say," he repeated, "you needn't be afraid of me. I'm no thug. All I wanted to ask you is if this is the Grand Circus or Belle Isle."

TOP OF MONT BLANC.

An Observatory Is Now Being Built There.

The Philadelphia Times has been investigating the subject of observatories on mountain tops, and in a recent issue printed a long story from its Paris correspondent about the observatory now being built on the apex of Mount Blanc by M. Janssen, says the New York World. The Times prints a picture showing how the material for the structure was carried up the precipitous mountain by guides, each of whom was able to convey about fifty pounds at a trip. Some years ago another Frenchman, M. Vallot, constructed an observatory on a rock within about 1,400 feet of the top. M. Vallot had tried to build one higher up, but could find no suitable location for the structure. Ice and snow do not offer advantages for the foundation of a house, especially when it will be subjected to the heavy winds that shriek around the summit of a mountain. M. Janssen, however, expects to succeed and hopes to have his observatory completed next fall. The Times gives the following figures showing the altitudes at which observatories have been established: Arequipa (Charchani), Peru, 16,650 feet high; Janssen's Mont Blanc, France, 15,776 feet high; Pike's peak, Colorado, 15,208 feet high; Monta Rosa, Italy, 14,956 feet high; Vallot's, Mont Blanc, France, 14,320.

Walt Whitman the Man.

In a recently published book, entitled "Walt Whitman, the Man," Mr. Thomas Donaldson deals almost wholly with the personality of the Good Gray Poet, and completely shatters the belief held by many that he was a moral and literary outlaw, reeking with the atmosphere of the beer cellar, feeding on the adulation of his admirers, and ready to accept their charity on all occasions. Says his biographer: "I knew him when he was capable of evil, had he desired to be or do evil, and in all that period I found him to be a man of honor; just, brave and simple in all worldly thought and action. He loved humanity, while holding himself aloof from close contact with it. Suffering appealed to him. Sickness invoked his aid. He regarded poverty as a dispensation of nature, and never turned the cold shoulder to its appeals. He did not claim that the world owed him a living, but only asked that it permit him to make one for himself. To this end —in health he worked, and when out of health he worked. Distinctly and emphatically he was not a mendicant, a beggar, a loafer or a useless mouth. He was at work always, even when work to him was mental and physical torture."

A Child and the Letters.

An ingenious person named Krohn, whose patience is evidently more highly developed than his sense of humor, has been making some experiments that are supposed to be very important to scientific teachers. He has found that it takes a young child 364-1000 of a second to recognize the letter c, 358-1000 of a second to recognize the letter t; while the word c-a-t as a whole is recognized in 339-1000 of a second. Therefore, he says, primary teaching should be done by words and not by letters, and the letters should be 1-12 of an inch high and printed in a line not more than four inches long. We don't know exactly how he has discovered all these things, but that does not matter, for he is evidently a very profound person. We have done some figuring ourselves on the basis of his researches and we find that, following out his method and adopting his kind of a reading book, a child of 5 years in an average daily lesson would each day save 9789-10000 of a minute out of its valuable time. Think of that!—The Bookman.

PURIFYING DRINKING WATER.

Storing It Away the Best Way of Filtering.

It is well known that alum will remove organic and other matters from water so as to render it clear and pure; but it is now said that fluoride is superior to alum for this purpose, says Mechan's Monthly. One ounce of fluoride is used to every 1,000 gallons of water. After all, the best kind of purifier is nature's own. The minute organisms known as bacteria are the chief causes of the impurity of drinking water. These invisible creatures have to live as well as their larger brethren, and they must eat to live. As soon as they have eaten all in the water that there is to feed on they die. Dr. Frankland has recently stated, from his recent examination of water stored for two weeks, that it seems as pure and free from bacteria life as if it had passed through the best of filters, but it seems strange that this should have so recently come under Dr. Frankland's experience. Everyone knows that there is no purer or better water in the world than that which is supplied to seafaring people. Almost any kind of water stored away in a ship's tank becomes absolutely pure after the vessel has been a few weeks at sea. This is usually ascribed in popular language to fermentation, but there is really nothing to ferment: it is simply that the bacteria have eaten everything in the water there is to eat and then died of starvation.

Shoes with Stoves in Them.

An effective means of warming the feet has been patented in Germany. The inventor calls it "heatable shoes." Within the heel of the shoe, which is hollowed out, there is a receptacle for a glowing substance, similar to that used in the Japanese hand-warmers. Between the soles, imbedded in asbestos covers, is a rubber bag, which is filled with water. The water is heated, and as it circulates while the wearer of the shoe is walking, it keeps the surface of the foot warm. A small safety valve is provided so that the bag cannot burst. The warmth given by this sole never rises above 70 degrees Fahrenheit, and will last about eight hours. The sole is slightly thicker than that of a wet-weather boot.

Cities and Morals.

This shifting of the population from the country to the towns is accompanied by a profound change in the habits, thought and mode of life of a large portion of the population. The wits are sharpened and the moral sense is dulled by the excitement and variety of city life. There is a feverish activity arising from the struggle of so many human beings in such keen competition and such close contact with each other. The crowding of the population increases with the value of real estate and the injury to health and morals increases in the same ratio.—Scribner's.

She Knew the Rules.

He had listened to her upbraiding for two hours by the downstairs clock.

"My love," he said mildly, "don't you think it is about time for you to adjourn sine die?"

She knew her Cushing's Manual like a book.

"I shall adjourn sine die presently," she coldly remarked, "and then—I will at once call an extra session."

And the husband rolled over with a groan.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MISSIONS.

Reports from various cities indicate that the charitable work of the order of Deaconesses is reaping splendid results for the Master.

It is estimated that Union Congregational church, Boston, has given $200,000 to foreign missions and $300,000 to home missions and other charities during the seventy-four years of its existence.

Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, of the Volunteers of America, has just completed a week of excellent work among the churches of Chicago in the interest of that class of mission work which she so ably represents.

A novel series of religious services for employes of the Union Traction company was inaugurated by the Sunday Breakfast association at the depot, Fifteenth and Cumberland streets, Philadelphia. President Bean conducted the exercises and an address was made by Rev. Leonard Weaver.

The Chicago Training School for Missions, located at 4949 Indiana avenue, has received the unconditional gift of deeds to property in that city valued at $8,000 to $10,000. The attention of the public is being more and more drawn to this institution, which is putting hundreds of workers into the mission fields of this and other countries. An endowment fund of $100,000 is now greatly needed.

NATURE AND SCIENCE.

The muscles of the mocking bird's larynx are larger in proportion to the size of the bird than those of any other creature.

Recent experiments at the Boston University Medical school show that the X-ray will produce sensation on the cells of the cortex of the brain directly, and without mediation of the nerve filaments, or in other words that the blind may be able to see by training in mental perception.

Dr. Jagadis Chunder Bose, professor of physical science in London, claims a discovery more wonderful than the X-ray, and by which it is possible to flash electric currents through mountains, and ring bells and fire guns many thousand feet away without the use of wires. Prof. Bose says this new ray will do away with dangers caused by fogs, as it will penetrate the thickest fog—in fact, there is nothing it cannot pierce.

In so dry a region as central Australia frogs are found in fair numbers, creeks and claypans "swarming" with them. As the waters dry up the frogs disappear in their burrows, remaining till the rains come again. "Certain species of them," says Spencer, "gorge themselves with water before they go into their retreats, and in times of drought the natives dig them out and obtain enough water from their bodies to satisfy their thirst.

The whole subject of the methods by which seeds are distributed is attracting considerable attention just now. It seems almost impossible to construct any general law by which to explain the reason for things in nature. It does seem, for instance, safe to say that wings are given to seeds to enable them to fly far away from the parent tree, and thus extend the area of territory occupied by the species. But in many of the large-seeded pines—the linden and others—the hollow seeds only are the ones blown away. The solid, perfect seeds remain around the parent tree. The objectors to everything argue that wings are given to fan out light, useless material. But this surely cannot always be.

Every man knows of a position superior to his own that he could fill much better than the incumbent.—Puck.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. The Great McEwen.

McEwen, the renowned hypnotist and mind reader, is giving a week's entertainment at the opera house this week. He came here heralded by the press and public of the places he has visited as the greatest artist in his line ever seen, and his exhibitions here fully bear out the statements. At St. Cloud Germania Hall, was unable every night to accommodate the crowds that flocked to hear him, and on Thursday evening according to the Journal-Press, he turned away over 500 people.

The gentleman is certainly the fairest exponent of the mysterious art we have ever had here. He does not make any absurd claims that he cannot substantiate, but does everything and more than he claims. On Monday evening he devoted considerable time to explaining what hypnotism really is, and wherein it differs from what is known as mesmerism. His remarks were very interesting and instructive to all interested in the subject.

He has not failed to hypnotize and place under his control anyone who would give himself up to his influence and suggestions, and the laughable and ludicious situations and attitudes he places his subjects in nightly keeps the audience in an uproar. On Wednesday he placed one of the young men accompanying him in a cataleptic state, and he lay during the day like a corpse in the show window of Atwood's drug store, and was taken to the opera house to be awakened that evening. There will be two more performances, tonight and tomorrow night, the program each evening being entirely different. McEwen and his wonderful powers are the talk of the town.

Miss Pentreath's condition is even more serious. Her temperature is very high and she is unconscious, and heart complications are feared. That the Lord in his mercy may spare their lives is the prayer of their many faiends.

TELLS A GRAPHIC STORY.

Custer's Operations Against the Sioux Indorsed by Major General Miles.

In Major General Miles' personal recollections of army life a chapter is devoted to General Custer and the Sioux war, the massacre and the campaign that followed. The points of interest in this history of the last great campaign against the Indians are naturally the operations leading to the death of Custer and the operations in Arizona that led to the retiring of General Crook from active command and the transfer of General Miles to that district.

General Miles writes with great feeling and unhesitatingly champions the cause of General Custer in the campaign against Sitting Bull. He states clearly the conditions that prevailed when General Custer moved with the Seventh cavalry into the Indian country, when General Terry, in command of the department, General Sheridan in command of the military district and General Sherman in command of the army, knew not enough of the conditions and circumstances to give definite instructions. General Miles admits that at the time there was a feeling in military circles that General Custer's training in the civil war and his general temper in battle were against him as the commander of an expedition against the hostile Indians, and General Grant insisted that Terry, and not Custer, be placed in command of the expedition. It was admitted, on the other hand, that General Custer had more experience in fighting Indians than General Terry, and that he would be in command of the active column.

General Miles takes the position that General Custer's dispositions for the battle were in direct accordance with the best military strategy, and that he failed to defeat the Indians simply because he was not adequately supported by the seven companies of cavalry that were to act in concert with him. He insists that General Custer did not disobey orders, because the last instructions of General Terry were to make his own dispositions and to use his own judgment. General Miles conducted the winter campaign immediately following the Custer massacre. He was familiar with the Indians who participated in that campaign. He visited the battlefield, traced the line of battle and the development of the fighting, or the progress of the battle, by the position of the dead bodies, and he scouts the idea that General Custer moved up the ravine, a theory that was advanced by some of his critics, but shows that the bodies found in the ravine were those of the 30 or 40 men who had attempted to escape when all their comrades had been slaughtered. He criticises the actions of Major Reno, and incidentally those of Captain Benteen. He tells, in short, a graphic story of what must have been one of the most dramatic battles of history and his discussion is from first to last a defense of the dead Custer and severe condemna-

The best of medicines are none too good for sick folks. It's bad enough to be sick without running chances with second grade goods. P. P. C. GAS COFFEE ROASTER.

The above is a cut of the celebrated GAS ROASTER, which has revolutionized the roasted coffee business. Instead of its being slowly baked over a fire and all the essential oils lost, the coffee in the new roaster is taken up, dropped through the hot flame of gas, and repeated until the coffee is thoroughly roasted. The pores of the berry are quickly closed by the flame, retaining all of the oil which makes the difference between a good and bad cup of coffee. In gas roasted coffee the aroma and strength is all retained in the roasted berry. The best estimate makes two pounds of gas roasted coffee equal to three pounds of coffee roasted by the old process. It is so much superior to all other coffees, that we would be pleased to have you give it a trial.

The Great McEwen.

McEwen, the renowned hypnotist and mind reader, is giving a week's entertainment at the opera house this week. He came here heralded by the press and public of the places he has visited as the greatest artist in his line ever seen, and his exhibitions here fully bear out the statements. At St. Cloud Germania Hall, was unable every night to accommodate the crowds that flocked to hear him, and on Thursday evening according to the Journal-Press, he turned away over 500 people.

The gentleman is certainly the fairest exponent of the mysterious art we have ever had here. He does not make any absurd claims that he cannot substantiate, but does everything and more than he claims. On Monday evening he devoted considerable time to explaining what hypnotism really is, and wherein it differs from what is known as mesmerism. His remarks were very interesting and instructive to all interested in the subject.

He has not failed to hypnotize and place under his control anyone who would give himself up to his influence and suggestions, and the laughable and ludicious situations and attitudes he places his subjects in nightly keeps the audience in an uproar. On Wednesday he placed one of the young men accompanying him in a cataleptic state, and he lay during the day like a corpse in the show window of Atwood's drug store, and was taken to the opera house to be awakened that evening. There will be two more performances, tonight and tomorrow night, the program each evening being entirely different. McEwen and his wonderful powers are the talk of the town.

That the Lord in his mercy may spare their lives is the prayer of their many faiends.

TELLS A GRAPHIC STORY.

Custer's Operations Against the Sioux Indorsed by Major General Miles.

In Major General Miles' personal recollections of army life a chapter is devoted to General Custer and the Sioux war, the massacre and the campaign that followed. The points of interest in this history of the last great campaign against the Indians are naturally the operations leading to the death of Custer and the operations in Arizona that led to the retiring of General Crook from active command and the transfer of General Miles to that district.

General Miles writes with great feeling and unhesitatingly champions the cause of General Custer in the campaign against Sitting Bull. He states clearly the conditions that prevailed when General Custer moved with the Seventh cavalry into the Indian country, when General Terry, in command of the department, General Sheridan in command of the military district and General Sherman in command of the army, knew not enough of the conditions and circumstances to give definite instructions. General Miles admits that at the time there was a feeling in military circles that General Custer's training in the civil war and his general temper in battle were against him as the commander of an expedition against the hostile Indians, and General Grant insisted that Terry, and not Custer, be placed in command of the expedition. It was admitted, on the other hand, that General Custer had more experience in fighting Indians than General Terry, and that he would be in command of the active column.

General Miles takes the position that General Custer's dispositions for the battle were in direct accordance with the best military strategy, and that he failed to defeat the Indians simply because he was not adequately supported by the seven companies of cavalry that were to act in concert with him. He insists that General Custer did not disobey orders, because the last instructions of General Terry were to make his own dispositions and to use his own judgment. General Miles conducted the winter campaign immediately following the Custer massacre. He was familiar with the Indians who participated in that campaign. He visited the battlefield, traced the line of battle and the development of the fighting, or the progress of the battle, by the position of the dead bodies, and he scouts the idea that General Custer moved up the ravine, a theory that was advanced by some of his critics, but shows that the bodies found in the ravine were those of the 30 or 40 men who had attempted to escape when all their comrades had been slaughtered. He criticises the actions of Major Reno, and incidentally those of Captain Benteen. He tells, in short, a graphic story of what must have been one of the most dramatic battles of history and his discussion is from first to last a defense of the dead Custer and severe condemna

P.P. C. Gas Coffee Roaster.

The above is a cut of the celebrated GAS ROASTER, which has revolutionized the roasted coffee business. Instead of its being slowly baked over a fire and all the essential oils lost, the coffee in the new roaster is taken up, dropped through the live flame of gas, and repeated until the coffee is thoroughly roasted. The pores of the berry are quickly closed by the flame, retaining all of the oil which makes the difference between a good and bad cup of coffee. In gas roasted coffee the aroma and strength is all retained in the roasted berry. The best estimate makes two pounds of gas roasted coffee equal to three pounds of coffee roasted by the old process. It is so much superior to all other coffees, that we would be pleased to have you give it a trial.

One more month of Democratic times. Then we can reasonably expect something will be done to relieve the country.

The Nevada legislature has passed a bill legalizing prize fighting. But then what could you expect from a state that was solid for the great free silver swindle.

The strongest cabinet for years will be that of McKinley. Sherman, as secretary of state, Gage, as treasurer, and Alger, as secretary of war, make a combination that can't be beat.

The great McEwen has not hypnotized Editor Stivers of the Journal. The free silver barons did that nearly a year ago, and he has not fully recovered yet, although the elections nearly broke the spell.

Gov. Turney of Tennessee, granted 820 pardons during his term of two years. That is to say, he did more for his party than any other Democratic Governor, with the exception of Altgeld, says the St. Louis Democrat.

The Journal says the Tribune editor is densely ignorant of the money question, and the Tribune says the Journal editor is a demagogue and a calamity howler, and the general public is inclined to believe both are right.

The Journal did not publish the number of business failures the past week as it showed a large falling off as compared with the previous week and the same week in previous years. That would not suit its purpose to create business unrest.

Cloth Gowns.

Nothing exceeds in popularity, this season, for the usefully smart gowns that are not too elaborate for the street yet are sufficiently handsome for afternoon social functions, the whole family of plain cloth,—broadcloth, faced-cloth with a satiny lustre, and silky-haired zibelines. All rich dark shades are popular in these cloths, but especially choice are dark plum and heliotrope, a rich hunter's-green, and golden brown. Among the blues a very trying, intensely bright shade, having a purplish cast, is occasionally seen, but it should be avoided as a snare by all but very young woman. It is so dominating a color that in most cases it eclipses its wearer and causes her to look countless years older.—From "Review of Fashions," in Demorest's Magazine for February.

Jack Pine Minstrels.

The Jack Pine Minstrels are making very satisfactory progress with their rehearsals and the boys feel confident that they will give a better show than before. The strong chorus of last season has been strengthened by the addition of several good voices, and chorus singing will as before be a great feature of the entertainment. The music is new and up-to-date, and includes many of the most popular songs of the day. There will be a number of new specialties this year, The entertainment throughout will be clean and wholesome, refined and artistic, and everyone will thoroughly enjoy it. It is understood that arrangements will be made for an excursion from Staples on the second evening of the entertainment.

TRESPASSERS ON STATE LANDS.

BEWARE!

NOTICE is hereby given that any person or persons who cuts, removes or carries away any timber, standing or down, from any lands belonging to or under the control of the State of Minnesota, without first having obtained a legal permit from the STATE LAND COMMISSIONER, shall be deemed guilty, of willful trespass, and on conviction thereof subject to heavy fines and penalties.

Section 7, Chapter 163, General Laws of 1895, reads as follows:

"Whoever cuts or removes, or employs or induces any other person, firm or corporation to cut or remove any timber or other property from State lands, contrary to the provisions of this act (namely, a legal permit, or contrary to the provisions of such permit) or without conformity in each and every respect thereto, shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand (1,000) dollars, or by imprisonment in the State Prison not exceeding two (2) years, or by both, in case the trepass is adjudged to have been willful."

In addition to the criminal proceedings, the State Land Commissioner is required to collect treble damages (treble stumage value) for all such timber cut or carried away; or, he may confiscate the same wherever found, and sell the same for the benefit of the State.

No hardwood timber belonging to the State can be sold separate from the land. By hardwood is meant all varieties of timber outside of pine, spruce, cedar and tamarac.

All railroad companies, merchants and dealers in logs, manufactured lumber, railroad ties, cordwood, posts and piling, should exercise due care in dealing with customers, so as to protect themselves against any loss on account of timber illegally removed from State lands.

Depredations on State lands must be stopped at any cost. No leniency will be shown any trespasser. The provisions of the stringent land law of 1895 will be rigidly enforced.

Dated St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 1, 1897.

R. C. DUNN,
State Land Commissioner.

It is a pity that a more distinct line cannot be drawn between community and individual rights.

Criticism acts on a man like a mustard plaster; if any is given you, hug it tight until it does you good.

Every one is the object of somebody's suspicion, and should regulate his conduct with that thought in mind.

A poultry show in Kansas City claims to have the costliest fowls in the world. But no one can make Bob Fitzsimmons believe it.

Ninety-two percent of all the families in Great Britain own property of a less value than $5,000. The other 8 per cent practically own all.

An Indianapolis highwayman tried to rob a St. Louis lawyer on a dark back street the other night, and now the lawyer is wearing a new gold watch.

Never urge a young lady to play for you on the piano after she has told you that she can't play without her notes—Even if she can you won't miss much, usually.

There is no such thing as a natural distribution of wealth among mankind. Men distribute it to themselves according to the dictates of their own shrewdness, good luck, greed, industry, honesty or dishonesty.

The men find it hard to be satisfactory. Charley Hamble, of Holton, was killed because he refused to marry; Jacob Holton, of Hamble, was killed because he wanted to marry. This all happened in Pennsylvania.

Because a man is eminent in national politics, does that imply that the public is well-bred when it demands from the newspapers an account of his daughter's gowns or her love affairs? If another man offers to the public his best thoughts, hoping earnestly to help some struggling soul in life, and his work commands universal attention and respect, why should his clothes, his accent, his family, be dragged into public view to gratify a million curious eyes?

A gospel wagon, run by a gasoline engine, is the newest device for spreading the gospel in New York city. It will be in the harge of two Baptist clergymen and their wives, and will patrol every portion of the city. The vehicle will contain a regular pulpit, an organ and a choir. During the cold weather a large tank of coffee will be placed in the wagon, and when it is too cold to preach the clergymen will distribute coffee and tracts to those around the wagon.

A peculiar state of affairs exists in Dorchester county, Maryland, in reference to the public schools. One of the main sources of school revenue for many years has been from local oyster licenses. A recent change in the law requires one-third of this revenue to be paid into the state oyster fund, thereby diminishing the school fund to the tune of about $4,000 a year. The salaries of country teachers now range from $180 to $270 per year, the latter being for the best qualified teachers in charge of the largest and most advanced schools. The question of increased school revenues will be a potent factor in Maryland politics during the coming year.

A novel charity has been organized by Lazarus Morgenthau, an unostentatious philanthropist of New York. Its purpose is to provide dowries to worthy German orphan girls who marry worthy men. At present its fund is large enough to furnish every year sixteen dowries of one hundred dollars each, but the founder expects that in a few years the society will have a fund of one million dollars, sufficient to make a wedding present of one hundred dollars in gold, every year, to four hundred worthy but parentless German girls. No regard is to be paid to the creed of the orphan, who may be married by any religious ceremony she desires, provided she is first joined to her husband by a public civil ceremony. The society's board of directors will be composed of one hundred Jews and one hundred Christians. Already six orphan societies—one Protestant, two Roman Catholic and three Hebrew—have been asked to select suitable applicants for the society's wedding presents.

A Washington colored boy took a pair of old shoes, which he had just purchased, to the station house Tuesday, and said to the chief that there was something wrong with them, he having noticed some shining substance in the heel of one of them, which he discovered accidentally in removing a piece of loose leather. Right living is, in one sense, a living without making mistakes. To make mistakes is human, however, and a mistake may at least have in it the merit of activity. The person who does nothing may escape blundering, but a do-nothing policy is not often a help to progress. "Recently," said a notable speaker at a memorable gathering lately assembled, "I saw some people who have made no mistakes for thousands of years; they were in the museum of the University of Pennsylvania, in the Peruvian and Mexican departments, in glass cases."

THE EARTH'S TEMPERATURE.

Some Observations Made in the Deepest Holes.

Physical geography teaches that the increase of temperature as we descend into the earth is about one degree Fahrenheit to every fifty-five feet descent. The following deep mines of the world show accurately the amount of this increase in the most notable instances: The deepest mine in the world is the Red Jacket shaft of the Calumet & Hecla mines, in the Lake Superior region, which has been sunk to a depth of 4,900 feet. The greatest depth in Great Britain is 3,474 feet; Belgium, 3,937 feet; Austria-Hungary, 3,672 feet; Victoria, 3,302 feet. In the Calumet & Hecla mines the increase of temperature is the least on record, being attributed to the presence of Lake Superior. On the other hand, the results of the Comstock are abnormally high, from the lode being heated by volcanic action and the presence of hot subterranean waters. The mean of a number of observations of the Red Jacket shaft gives an average of 60 feet per degree Fahrenheit. The deepest bore hole yet made was sunk by the Prussian government in 1893, and reached a depth of 6,572 feet, the increase being one degree Fahrenheit for 62.1 feet. In the Comstock mine it is so warm that sometimes it is impossible to work, due to the increased temperature, and ordinarily the men have to be changed very often, sometimes as often as once in twenty minutes.

Eating Dinner Backward.

An odd experiment with the kinetoscope took place not long ago in Boston. The subject was a man eating dinner, and the film, prepared especially for the occasion, was of unusual length, so that the whole performance could be recorded. The man entered the room, and, seating himself at a table, proceeded to cut up the food. The motion of the fork from the plate to his lips were carefully recorded until the last morsel of food had vanished. Then he arose and walked out of the room, leaving nothing on the table but bare dishes. The series of pictures was then reversed. It showed the man entering the room, walking backward. He sat dawn at the table, upon which there was nothing but bare dishes, and proceeded to extract food from his lips until he had filled the potato dish with potatoes and gradually put together a steak on the platter before him. Then he calmly backed out of the room, and the waiter did likewise with the meal that the man had apparently created.—Troy Times.

BLEW UP THE BANK

Hollidaysburg, Pa., Feb. 2.—An attempt was made to blow up the bank building lately occupied by the firm of Gardner, Morrow & Co., private bankers. Barr, Mrs. Elizabeth Christy and Dr. James D. Humes, Stiffler's milinery store and Goldman's clothing store were all damaged by the shock, every plate glass window in the store being demolished. To provide state aid for rural schools.

To amend the laws of 1894 relating to county agricultural associations and joint stock societies; providing for $12,000 state aid for such.

To regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors in counties; local option law.

Mr. Laybourn introduced a measure fixing the weight of a legal bushel of coal at eighty pounds. Mr. Bruslettan introduced a bill allowing villages of a population exceeding 1,000 to vote upon the question of the dissolution of the village corporations and of incorporation as cities from the same territory. Mr. Grondahl introduced a bill designing to give a legal status and protection to cycle paths. It provides that upon the petition of not less than fifteen persons, the county commissioners shall direct the county surveyor to make a survey of any desired cycle path, and his report and plat is made part of the county records. Debate followed during which it was shown that Senator Cole's motion was intended to pave the way for the introduction of a resolution in which the date of the vacancy of Day's seat will be left open.

President Gibbs then ruled that no motion would be entertained that carried with it the question of H. H. Dunn's right to the seat. In order to give the senators ample time to consider the matter, however, the motion was tabled for a day by a viva voce vote.

To amend the penal code relating to larceny.

To appropriate $28,000 for the state fair.

To create a board of pardons and defining its duties; substitute for S. F. 76, introduced by Knatvold.

In the House.

Mr. Cray introduced a bill providing that all municipal elections in this state shall be held during the months of February, March, April or May, of each odd-numbered year. By request Mr. Snodgrass offered a bill proposing a constitutional amendment to allow women to vote in municipal elections. Mr. Feig introduced a bill appropriating $25,000 for the construction of a girl's dormitory at the state agricultural college. Mr. Brusletten proposed an amendment to the law relative to the annual school meetings in common school districts. Mr. McDonald proposed another bill requiring the inspection of cattle, sheep and swine designated for slaughter for human food. Mr. Donnelly offerred a resolution calling on the state auditor for information as to the cost of printing the official state ballots and the amount of fees charged against candidates for office.

The calendar was taken up and three bills given their third reading and passed. They were Mr. Smith's bill exempting a typewriter from execution; the judiciary committee's bill allowing district courts to issue writs of replevin, and Mr. Schmidt's bill to legalize certain acknowledgments. Mr. Helmerdinger called up his resolution calling for a special committee of seven to prepare a bill reducing state, county and legislative salaries, and naming 20 per cent as about the proper average reduction. The resolution was amended by striking out the 20 per cent limitation and all reference as to where the knife should be laid. After considerable discussion the resolution was adopted as amended.

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—The senate put in a very busy day. What with general orders, taken up for the first time and flooded with bills released from the judiciary and other committees, any number of new bills, resolutions, etc., the senators had their hands full and an all-day session was the result. Several bills were passed. Among them and most important, just at present, was the board of pardons bill, over which was a lengthy debate in committee of the whole while it was being considered under the head of general orders. While pursuing its devious and somewhat perilous course through general orders it was quite severely amended by taking away from the board the authority to appoint a clerk at a salary and directing that the clerical work shall be done by the clerk of the supreme court without compensation. The following bills were passed:

To amend the laws relating to the organization of cemetery associations.

Joint memorial to congress relating to the classification of railway mail clerks.

To legalize the issuance of bonds for the city of Moorhead.

The following bills were introduced:

To provide for assistance in the office of public examiner.

To prohibit the desecration of Decoration day.

To provide compensation for county surveyors.

To reorganize the faculty of the state agricultural school and university.

To provide a constitutional amendment relative to the taxation of railroads.

To regulate the election of delegates to political conventions.

In the House.

The house devoted most of two sessions to the discussion of the arbitration treaty, pending before the United States senate. That is to say, the discussion was based upon resolutions expressive of legislative opinion as to the treaty, but during an hour and a quarter of the debate in the forenoon, occupied by Mr. Donnelly it wandered very wide of the mark. During the afternoon session something was said about the treaty, and the final result of it all was that the adoption of the senate resolution, favoring arbitration in general, but carefully and explicitly refraining from an indorsement of the treaty, with an amendment offered by Mr. Douglas, expressive of opposition to the treaty unless the Monroe doctrine was specifically guarded.

Mr. Feig, from the committee on towns and counties, reported favorably the following bills: To require townships to maintain guide posts; to reenact section 1, chapter 176, Laws of 1889, relating to towns; to repeal chapter 298, Laws of 1895, for the enlargement of organized counties.

Mr. McDonald, from the committee on state library, reported the bill for traveling libraries favorably. Mr. Littleton reported several bills from the committee on crimes and punishment. The McDonald bill, giving the police power to "vag" criminals of reputation was reported for indefinite postponement.

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—The senate calendar was taken up yesterday and ten bills were passed. Other useless measures have been killed, and the upper house is now in a fair way of acquitting itself commendably in the matter of rapid and careful legislation. The senate concurred in the house amendment to Senator Wyman's arbitration treaty resolution.

A communication was received from the governor stating that he had withdrawn the appointment of Knute Bondy on the state board of equalization.

Senator Potter introduced a bill to provide for the loaning of the permanent school and university funds to counties.

Senator Knatvold introduced a bill to repeal the laws relating to bounties for the arrest of horse thieves.

The following bills were passed:

A bill relating to property exempt from taxation.

A bill relating to cemetery associations.

A bill for an act fixing the fees to be paid by applicants for certificates of declaration of intention to become citizens of the United States, and for certificates of full citizenship.

A bill in regard to the powers of the district court; may issue writs of certiarari.

A bill for an act to prevent the furnishing of impure water and prescribing punishment therefor.

The senate adjourned until 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

In the House.

The house spent the greater part of the day in committee of the whole considering bills, several of which were disposed of.

Mr. Hayter's bill proposing a constitutional amendment to make the governor ineligible for the office of United States senator excited the most general discussion. The committee of the whole recommended the bill for indefinite postponement and the house indorsed the action.

The following bills were introduced:

Relating to actions against co-partnerships.

Relating to limitations of appropriations to certain institutions.

To provide for the creation of a department of anthropology in the state university.

Relating to the renewal of judgments of the courts of this state.

Relating to the organization of annuity, safety deposit and trust companies.

To provide for further publicity as to the financial condition of banks doing business in this state.

St. Paul, Feb. 1.—In the house the speaker presented a communication from the governor transmitting the various reports on the question of the location of the new insane asylum. There were three reports, a majority report, a minority report and a supplemental majority report. A motion that the reports should be printed was adopted as was also a resolution calling on the governor for the minutes of the commission's meetings.

Mr. Feig's resolution opposing the bill now pending in congress for national grain inspection was adopted.

The following bills were introduced:

To provide for submission to the voters of each county, or any subdivision thereof, of the question of granting license for the sale of intoxicating liquors.

To compel the publication of the names and officers and stockholders of all banking institutions and the amount of stock held by each.

To provide for the immediate enforcement of the liability of the directors and stockholders of banking institutions for the benefit of creditors.

To amend section 1863, General Statutes of 1894, relating to obstruction of public highways.

To prevent fraudulent dealing in cider, wine, maple molasses or syrup, maple sugar, jellies, olive oil, buckwheat flour, the edible nuts, allspice, ginger cinnamon, mace, cloves, black and red pepper and mustard.

To provide for the election of inspectors of mines by the people.

Giving liens on logs and other forest products for the better security of material men and others.

To encourage and promote immigration.

To provide for the recovery of legal expenses, brought by creditors of corporations to enforce the liability of its stockholders.

Regulating the fees of sheriffs on sale of land on execution.

To amend section 31, chapter 36, General Statutes 1878, relating to hiring teachers for public schools.

The house spent the remainder of the day in committee of the whole considering bills.

St. Paul, Feb. 2.—The house took up Mr. Schmidt's bill to provide for a board, consisting of the governor, auditor and public examiner, to select depositories for state funds, and spent most of the session wrangling over it. On the part of the opponents of the bill a good deal of the discussion wandered very far from the provisions of the bill, and they tried to read into the measure a number of things that did not belong there. Some of the country members seemed to think that it was intended as a blow at the country banks, and opposed it accordingly. When the bill was reached on general orders in committee of the whole, Mr. Anderson in the chair, Mr. Scott moved to refer the bill to the committee on banks and banking. This proposition finally prevailed, but not until a long discussion had occurred. Mr. Ferris offered an amendment, providing that at least 2 per cent interest should be paid. Mr. McDonald offered another amendment providing that at least three of the five bondsmen should not be officers or directors of the bank upon whose bond they became sureties.

Aside from the consideration of this question the session of the house was of a routine character. Mr. Olds presented a petition from the grand jury of Yellow Medicine county praying for a modification of our grand jury system, so that criminals may be tried upon the presentment of the prosecuting officer of any county, and the grand jury may not be called except under extraordinary circumstances. Fosness' bill repealing the horse thief bounty was passed with an amendment exempting pending claims. Mr. Littleton's bill allowing certain corporations to amend or renew their articles at special meetings was also passed. A resolution allowing the Mountain Iron committee to audit the bills for the necessary expenses of the investigation, was adopted. The house spent some time in committee of the whole but considered no bill except the depository bill.

Following bills were introduced:

To provide for the employment of court reporters for the district courts of the state.

Relating to interest on money and usury.

To amend chapter 170, General Laws of 1885, relating to the dissolution of independent school districts.

To preserve the public safety by regulating the sale, storage and delivery of benzine, gasoline or naptha.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Condensed Proceedings of the National Law Mill.

Washington, Jan. 28. — A crisis in the debate on the Nicaragua canal bill was reached in the senate. It brought out an energetic statement from Senator Sherman in which he foreshadowed a new treaty by which the United States could build the canal without the intermediation of a private concession. The senator declared that this governmental execution of the project was the only feasible one and that all private efforts in that direction had proved failures. Mr. Vilas followed with a motion to recommit the canal bill to the committee on foreign relations. The motion was changed so as to make the recommittal to the special committee of which Mr. Morgan is chairman. The senate adjourned before a vote was taken and the Vilas motion to recommit is pending. The military academy appropriation bill carrying approximately $479,000, was passed after the defeat of the amendment for participation of the West Point cadets in the inauguration ceremony.

The house, after a debate of four hours, adopted the conference report on the immigration bill by a vote of 131 to 118. The principal criticism of the measure agreed on by the conferees in debate was based upon the extension of the educational test to female as well as male immigrants on the ground that it might divide families and to the limitation to the ability of an immigrant to read and write the English language or the language of their native country or residence.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The open session of the senate was comparatively brief, as more than half the day was spent behind closed doors. During the open session the bill for an international monetary conference was debated. Mr. Chandler speaking in favor of it and Mr. Stewart of Nevada against. Mr. Chandler's speech was in the nature of a statement of the attitude of the Republican side of the chamber on the bid. Mr. Stewart, although criticising the commission as futile, stated that he would not oppose the measure. The Nicaragua canal bill and the bankruptcy bill were before the senate for a brief time, but no progress was made on either of them. Early in the day a lively debate occurred over Mr. Allen's resolution questioning the president's right to foreclose against the Pacific railroads. The resolution went over for a speech by Mr. Thurston of Nebraska to-morrow.

The house passed the Indian appropriation bill and entered into the consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill, but all interest in these two measures were overshadowed by remarkable speeches, one made by Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio attacking ex-Gov. Altgeld of Illinois, and the other by Mr. Dearmond of Missouri, heaping ridicule on Secretary Morton for the recent issue of a pamphlet entitled the "Farmers' Interest in Finance." Among the bills passed was one to pension Mary A. Viel, widow of Maj. W. D. Sanger, Fifty-fifth Illinois infantry, at the rate of $25 per month.

A number of amendments to the Indian appropriation bill were made before it passed. The salaries and expenses of the Dawes commission were reduced from $50,000 to $43,000.

Washington, Jan. 30. — By the decisive vote of 46 to 4 the senate passed the bill for the appointment of commissioners to an international monetary conference. The closing of the debate brought out several closing speeches. During the day Mr. Morgan—failing to secure an agreement for a vote on the Nicaraguan canal bill—announced that it would be urged to conclusion Monday. The senate adjourned until Monday.

The house witnessed another exciting and somewhat sensational episode. At the end of an acrimonious debate on the conference report on the bill to confer the rights and franchises of the Atlantic & Pacific railroad on the purchasers under the mortgage foreclosure, Mr. Powers of Vermont and Mr. Burrett of Massachusetts exchanged broadsiders. The report was rejected by an overwhelming majority—71 to 143—and the conferees were instructed to insist on the house amendments.

Just before adjournment Mr. Hardy, Rep., Ind., who was refused unanimous consent to continue a political speech he was making, declared that he would retaliate by objecting to every request for unanimous consent for the remainder of the session.

The remainder of the day was spent in the discussion of the agricultural appropriation bill.

Washington, Feb. 1. — The senate committee on foreign relations has agreed to report favorably on the arbitration treaty with amendments. All but two of these amendments are merely verbal. One of the two which are essential strikes out the clause providing for the selection of King Oscar as umpire when one is considered necessary.

The other important amendment is an addition to article 1 of the treaty and reads as follows: "No question which affects the foreign or domestic policy of either of the contracting parties or the relations of either with any other state or power, by treaty or otherwise, shall be subject to arbitration under this treaty, except by special agreement." The amendment eliminating the umpire clause was agreed to by a vote of 9 to 1. The vote in opposition is understood to have been cast by Senator Gray of Delaware. The vote on the motion to report the treaty favorably as amended was 6 to 4.

An amendment declaring in explicit terms that the Alaskan boundary question should not be included in the agreement for arbitration, was voted down as being unnecessary. The chairman was instructed to ask the senate to give the treaty consideration at as early a day as practicable. It is expected that when taken up it will lead to a protracted and animated debate in executive session.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The Nicaragua canal bill occupied the attention of the senate most of the day but no progress was made toward a final vote. Mr. Morgan, in charge of the measure, sought to secure an agreement for a vote to-morrow or Thursday but the opponents of the measure, led by Mr. Vilas and Mr. Daniel, resisted any agreement. Shortly after the opening the senate went into executive session. The arbitration treaty was presented with amendments and briefly discussed. The senate ratified the Japanese treaty with reference to trade marks.

When the open session was resumed a resolution by Mr. Stewart (Pop., Nev.) was agreed to, requesting the secretary of the interior for information as to the progress of the survey in Alaska. Mr. Chandler (Rep., N. H.) offered a resolution directing the senate committee on privileges and elections to inquire into all the circumstances of the recent Delaware election. Another brief executive session was held and the senate adjourned.

The house had a busy day. An unusually large number of bills were passed but few of them were of any considerable importance. It was suspension day, and the usual obstructive tactics were unavailing. About 4 p. m. the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was taken up and fair progress made before the hour of adjournment.

Washington, Feb. 3.—The feature of the senate was a very spirited debate on the conference report on the immigration bill. Mr. Gibson of Maryland opposed the report and Mr. Lodge defended it. After two hours' struggle the report went over and the Nicaragua canal bill was taken up, Mr. Vilas continuing his remarks. Mr. Teller of Colorado also entered in the debate in opposition to the measure. The bill was passed pensioning the surviving members of Gray's battalion of Arkansas volunteers.

The day in the house was very dull, the whole day being devoted to debate on appropriation bills. The diplomatic and consular bill was passed and considerable progress made with the District of Columbia bill. The bill as passed carries $1,673,708. Resolutions arranging for the formal canvassing of the electoral vote of the last presidential election on Wednesday, Feb. 10, were adopted.

Old Couple Burned.

Lima, Ohio, Feb. 3.—At North Baltimore Charles T. Russell, seventy years old, and his wife, sixty-five years old, were burned to death. They lived alone, and some time before midnight their house was discovered to be on fire. Russell managed to get out of the house but ran back after some money he had secreted and was overcome by the heat and cremated, his dead body with the charred money in his hand being found at the door. Mrs. Russell was in bed and was burned to a crisp.

REIGN OF TERROR.

Life and Liberty Very Uncertain Now at Constantinople.

Marseilles, Feb. 4. — Tewfik Pasha, until recently Turkish minister of foreign affairs, has arrived here. He states that a reign of terror prevails among the entourage of the sultan. He is fearful as to the fate of his family, whom he was compelled to leave behind him at Constantinople under the protection of the foreign embassies.

Lil Visits Mrs. Cleveland.

Washington, Feb. 3.—Ex-Queen Liliuokalani paid a visit to Mrs. Cleveland. She sent a note to Mrs. Cleveland asking the privilege of calling upon her. As she had been prevented from meeting Liliuokalani by reason of her absence upon the occasion of her call upon the president last week, Mrs. Cleveland assented to the request. Accordingly the ex-queen came to the White House about 4:45, the hour being set by Mrs. Cleveland.

Extract of Horse.

Chicago, Feb. 3. — The medical profession is thoroughly aroused over the development that immense quantities of alleged extract of beef, put up in jars and with labels that are an exact fac simile of the French importation, but which is in reality made out of horseflesh almost in the heart of the city, has been put on the market during the past year.

Chamberlain, S. D., Feb. 3.—Work on the new Indian schools at this place and Rapid City will be commenced as early in the spring as the weather will permit, the Indian bureau having just given notice that it is prepared to receive bids.

WILL FIGHT IN NEVADA.

Almost Certain That Corbett and Fitz Will Fight at Carson.

San Francisco, Jan. 29.—It is almost a foregone conclusion that the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight will take place in Nevada, and it is about equally certain that the ring will be pitched in Carson. Everything points to the verification of this dual prophecy.

No opposition to the measure was maintained in the upper house and the vast array of Nevadans who are favorable to the measure voice the opinion that it will go through without a struggle. The chief executive of the state has firmly declined to express an opinion as to how the matter strikes him.

The Carson people are working like beavers with a view to securing the fight, and while Reno and Virginia City have claims to put forward, it is admitted on every side that Carson stands the best chance of capturing the contest.

VOTES AT $500 EACH.

Direct Charges of Venality Made at Olympia.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 29.—In an authorized statement Dr. G. V. Calhoun has charged certain members of the legislature with venality, as follows:

"Senator Plummer of Spokane, president pro tem. of the senate, offered to vote for Squire for $500. He made the offer to me. Senator A. D. Warner of Everett came to me and told me there was a poll of twenty members who were not committed to any senatorial candidate; that they would agree to vote for Squire for $1,000 down and a contingent fee of $5,000 if Squire was elected."

New Revenue Cutters.

Washington, Jan. 29. — Capt. Shoemaker, chief of the revenue cutter service, has completed plans and specifications for the two new cutters authorized to be built by the act of June 11, 1896. The vessels are to be 205 feet over all, with 32 feet beam, and will be of modern construction. It is the intention of Capt. Shoemaker to have them ready to go into commission on the great lages in the spring of 1898.

Dervishes Retreating.

Massowah, Jan. 29. — Advices from Agordal say that the dervishes, who are believed to be advancing on this place, have abandoned their fortified camp at Amideb and are retreating in the direction of Aimosa, pursued by the friendly natives. It is further announced that there are no dervishes in the vicinity of Masala.

Damaged by Fire.

Indianapolis, Jan. 30. — The north wing of the Denison hotel, one of the finest in Indianapolis, was damaged by fire to the extent of about $20,000. The fire had gained considerable headway before an alarm was sounded and the damage caused by water was greater than by fire.

LUXURIES FOR DOGS.

WHERE THEY ARE PETTED, NURSED AND CARED FOR.

Hospital and Sanitarium Combined—A Washington Doctor Who Gives the Beasts Turkish Baths and Performs Operations on Them.

SITUATED between Pierce's Mill road and Zoological park, upon the high bank which overlooks Rock creek, is the new canine infirmary recently opened by Dr. Cecil French, a professor of canine medicine in the veterinary department of Columbia university, says the Washington Post. This institution is a novel one and is an experiment in this section of the country. It is a combined boarding-house and hospital for all dogs fortunate enough to have friends who can afford to indulge them in this luxury.

The building is one story high, forty feet long and twenty feet wide. Through the center of it is a corridor extending the length of the building and opening on this corridor are twelve cozy rooms, five on each side and two at the north end. Each of these small rooms is fitted up with hardwood and is heated by hot-water pipes so adjusted that the heat may be shut off from one and maintained in others as desired. The rooms have a large window and a door opening to the "run" or playground, and a ventilator over the door opening on the corridor.

These rooms are divided into wards for the occupancy of dogs having contagious diseases, such as mange and distemper; for invalid dogs having ailments that are not contagious, including accidents, and for boarders, which are generally pets left there while the owner is out of the city. The arrangement of the wards is such that the animals suffering from contagious diseases are completely isolated from their canine brethren.

At the south end of the corridor the operating room is on one side and the dispensary on the other. This operating room is supplied with hot and cold water, a zinc-covered operating table so arranged that all blood and water is conveyed from it to the sewer by pipes. In this room Dr. French performs all of his surgical treatment, from the amputation of a leg to enterotomy. He recently had a notable case of the latter class.

A pet dachshund owned by Miss Dorothy Rockhill, daughter of the assistant secretary of state, recently while playing swallowed a peach stone that he had picked up along the street. His suffering became intense and it was feared that the animal would have to be shot. Miss Rockhill was greatly attached to the little pet, which, because of his mischievous nature, was called "Sin," and before consenting to his being killed she consulted Dr. French. The animal was taken to the infirmary and the difficult operation of enterotomy was successfully performed and now "Sin" is as lively in the house of the assistant secretary of state as ever.

Pet dogs suffer much from toothache and the extraction of the offending teeth is a daily occurrence at the infirmary. A few days ago a well-known society lady took her little pet King Charles spaniel to the infirmary for treatment. The dog was blanketed and carried in her arms as she left her carriage and walked to the building. The owner appeared to be greatly distressed over the suffering of the dog and she begged Dr. French to cure it. An examination showed that the animal had toothache and when informed that the offending tooth could easily be extracted the society lady cried:

"Oh, no, doctor, not for the world. He would be a sight with a front tooth gone. Can't you fill it?"

Dr. French had never filled a tooth and is not a dentist, but he knew how the work should be done and he replied:

"Certainly, madam; leave the spaniel with me for three days and I will have him all right."

The society lady departed in her carriage and Dr. French an hour later was in the office of a dentist. After a consultation the doctor returned to the infirmary and the dentist accompanied him. The animal was placed on the operating table, put under the influence of an anesthetic, and while Dr. French watched the pulse the dentist burred out the cavity, and in an hour had placed a gold filling in the tooth, a filling which glistened in the sunlight as perfectly as if it had been in the incisor of a human being. When the owner of the dog called for him she was delighted with the work and the fee she left was proportionate with her delight.

Attached to the infirmary is a bathroom, where the dogs receive a shampoo and shower bath as often as required. Dr. French has had plans drawn for a Turkish bath for these pets, which he will build in the spring. He is also having an ambulance built which will be about the size of an ordinary delivery wagon, but will be cushioned and arranged for the purpose it will be put to.

Worth Seeing.

An amusing instance of the workings of an inquiring mind is given by Mr. Frederick Crowest in his "Musical Anecdotes." The company of one of the opera houses, at the close of a London season, had arrived at Liverpool to embark for a continental tour. The musical instruments were being shipped with the rest, and among them was the double bass, or "big fiddle," as it is also called, not cased as usual, for this member of the string family will stand a little rough treatment. It soon attracted the attention of the Jack Tars, three or four of whom settled round, scrutinizing it with keen interest. By the order of an officer they soon dispersed, but not long afterward another bluff seaman was discovered secretly watching it with wondering eyes. He was asked his reason for standing thus idle.

"Well, yer know," said Jack, "I'm just waiting for to see the length of the bloke's arm that can play that there fiddle!"

Mysteries of Helium.

As further experiments are carried with the new gas called helium—which was recognized in the sun before it had been found on the earth—the more remarkable it appears. Many chemists believe it consists of two gases, yet they have not been able satisfactorily to divide it. Professor Ramsay, one of its discoverers, has failed in every attempt to make it enter into a chemical combination; Lord Rayleigh has found that it possesses by far the lowest refractivity ever observed in any gas, and surprise is expressed at the astonishing distances traversed by electric sparks in darting through helium.

Adventures of a Man in a Big Dry-Goods Store.

"I'm just going into Blank's for a minute for a veil."

"Hump! well. I'll step across the street into the saloon to get my boots blacked."

"All right, dear; and if you should get your—er—your boots blacked within a minute or two come to the lace department to find me."

The bootblacking operation occupied a couple of minutes, observes the New York World, and the husband plunged through the constantly swinging doors of the store into the arms of a floor-walker.

"What can we do for you this morning, sir?"

"I want to find my wife."

The floor-walker looked puzzled.

"She's in the lace department."

"Oh, yes, sir; elevator to second floor, cross the main hall, through the shoe department, then up one short flight into the annex."

It took him ten minutes to get there and when he did his wife was gone. He was directed to turn to the waiting-room, the lost property room, the information bureau, and, finally, after more than half an hour's search, he found her in the restaurant with a cup of chocolate and an evening newspaper.

"Oh, here you are. What a time it took you to get your shine! Now, before we go to the steamship office, I want to go for a minute to the book department——"

"You'll come with me this very minute," he said, "or Aunt Lou may swim to England for all I care."

She went.

THE CARRIER PIGEON.

An Explorer's Wife Cheered by the Message That It Brought.

One day a wonderful bird tapped at the window of Mrs. Nansen's house at Christiania. Instantly the window was opened and the wife of the famous arctic explorer in another moment covered the little messenger with kisses and caresses, says the Philadelphia Times. The carrier pigeon had been away from the cottage thirty long months, but it had not forgotten the way home. It brought a note from Nansen stating that all was going on well with him and his expedition in the polar regions. Nansen had fastened a message to a carrier pigeon and turned the bird loose. The frail courier darted out into the blizzardly air. It flew like an arrow over a thousand miles of frozen waste and then sped forward over another thousand miles of ocean and plains and forests, and one morning entered the window of the waiting mistress and delivered the message which she had been awaiting so anxiously. We boast of human pluck, sagacity and endurance, but this little carrier pigeon, in its homeward flight, after an absence of thirty months, accomplished a feat so wonderful that we can only give ourselves up to the amazement and admiration which must overwhelm every one when the marvelous story is told. Mrs. Nansen's pigeon is one of the wonders of the world.

The Mexican Army.

The Mexican army is mainly composed of recruits forced into its ranks from the jails. A prisoner is released from confinement on condition that he enlists in the army; thus the cost of keeping him in jail at the expense of the state is avoided, and frequently a man is sentenced to enlistment without ever being sent to jail, with the same economical end in view. This method of recruiting the army prevails to a greater or less extent all through Mexico and is more particularly the rule in the province of Sonora, where not infrequently a whole regiment, barring the non-commissioned and commissioned officers, is composed of criminals. With a regiment so recruited it is not surprising that there are many desertions, and that esprit de corps is entirely lacking.

TURNS HIM OVER.

Machine That Shifts an Old Man in His Bed.

The San Francisco Examiner tells about a man who has invented an apparatus to turn him over in bed. The man is Walter Hyde. He lives in Alameda, Cal. Mr. Hyde is quite old and is troubled with an incomplete circulation of the blood, causing sleeplessness. If he remains in one position long a mild form of paralysis follows and he cannot sleep at all. Mr. Hyde concluded that if he had some mechanical means to turn himself over hourly at night he could go to sleep and not be under the necessity of awakening. Being somewhat of a mechanical turn of mind, Mr. Hyde concluded to experiment. The result of his tinkering and thinking is the mechanical contrivance which hourly turns over without awakening him from his slumbers and which he says works so charmingly that his paralysis with accompanying sleeplessness is a thing of the past. The frame on which the mattress rests hangs from the bedstead by means of pinions, one at the head and the other at the foot. The frame is kept in position by being secured at the sides to a clock-like apparatus with cogs and levers to tilt the mattress frame, the motion of the rocking being governed by the clock and spring apparatus. The tilting of the frame is so nicely graduated that the sleeper is unconscious of the change but continues undisturbed in his night's sleep, as the mechanism attached to the frame automatically changes his position during the hour to the right or the left side as the case may be.

BADLY FRIGHTENED.

The Stranger Was Not a Dick Turpin—Just Wanted to Ask a Question.

Had I been a woman I would have screamed at the top of my voice. But being only a man I gulped down the lump that swelled up in my throat and treated myself to an imitation of bravery, says a writer in the Detroit Journal. Just as I had entered the shade that hangs like a pall about the church on Bagley and Park a figure loomed up before me indistinctly silhoutted against the gray stones of the edifice. It was a man. He quickly withdrew a hand from his coat pocket and, pointing his index finger straight at me, muttered in a hoarse voice: "Stand a moment."

I could see no gleam in his eye, but I imagined that his extended finger was the barrel of a revolver and I thought I saw that gleam. I stood. I confess that my knees knocked together and a cold perspiration began to ooze out of my anatomy.

"Say," he said, after eyeing me for a moment, "you needn't be afraid of me."

But I was. I thought he had evil designs on me. The darkness of the place suggested a repetition of several things that Dick Turpin made a business of. I was not in conversational frame at the moment, chiefly because I was trying to masticate the lump in my throat and get it to go down.

"Say," he repeated, "you needn't be afraid of me. I'm no thug. All I wanted to ask you is if this is the Grand Circus or Belle Isle."

TOP OF MONT BLANC.

An Observatory Is Now Being Built There.

The Philadelphia Times has been investigating the subject of observatories on mountain tops, and in a recent issue printed a long story from its Paris correspondent about the observatory now being built on the apex of Mount Blanc by M. Janssen, says the New York World. The Times prints a picture showing how the material for the structure was carried up the precipitous mountain by guides, each of whom was able to convey about fifty pounds at a trip. Some years ago another Frenchman, M. Vallot, constructed an observatory on a rock within about 1,400 feet of the top. M. Vallot had tried to build one higher up, but could find no suitable location for the structure. Ice and snow do not offer advantages for the foundation of a house, especially when it will be subjected to the heavy winds that shriek around the summit of a mountain. M. Janssen, however, expects to succeed and hopes to have his observatory completed next fall. The Times gives the following figures showing the altitudes at which observatories have been established: Arequipa (Charchani), Peru, 16,650 feet high; Janssen's Mont Blanc, France, 15,776 feet high; Pike's peak, Colorado, 15,208 feet high; Monta Rosa, Italy, 14,956 feet high; Vallot's, Mont Blanc, France, 14,320.

Walt Whitman the Man.

In a recently published book, entitled "Walt Whitman, the Man," Mr. Thomas Donaldson deals almost wholly with the personality of the Good Gray Poet, and completely shatters the belief held by many that he was a moral and literary outlaw, reeking with the atmosphere of the beer cellar, feeding on the adulation of his admirers, and ready to accept their charity on all occasions. Says his biographer: "I knew him when he was capable of evil, had he desired to be or do evil, and in all that period I found him to be a man of honor; just, brave and simple in all worldly thought and action. He loved humanity, while holding himself aloof from close contact with it. Suffering appealed to him. Sickness invoked his aid. He regarded poverty as a dispensation of nature, and never turned the cold shoulder to its appeals. He did not claim that the world owed him a living, but only asked that it permit him to make one for himself. To this end—in health he worked, and when out of health he worked. Distinctly and emphatically he was not a mendicant, a beggar, a loafer or a useless mouth. He was at work always, even when work to him was mental and physical torture."

A Child and the Letters.

An ingenious person named Krohn, whose patience is evidently more highly developed than his sense of humor, has been making some experiments that are supposed to be very important to scientific teachers. He has found that it takes a young child 364-1000 of a second to recognize the letter c, 358-1000 of a second to recognize the letter t; while the word c-a-t as a whole is recognized in 339-1000 of a second. Therefore, he says, primary teaching should be done by words and not by letters, and the letters should be 1-12 of an inch high and printed in a line not more than four inches long. We don't know exactly how he has discovered all these things, but that does not matter, for he is evidently a very profound person. We have done some figuring ourselves on the basis of his researches and we find that, following out his method and adopting his kind of a reading book, a child of 5 years in an average daily lesson would each day save 9789-10000 of a minute out of its valuable time. Think of that!—The Bookman.

PURIFYING DRINKING WATER.

Storing It Away the Best Way of Filtering.

It is well known that alum will remove organic and other matters from water so as to render it clear and pure; but it is now said that fluoride is superior to alum for this purpose, says Mechan's Monthly. One ounce of fluoride is used to every 1,000 gallons of water. After all, the best kind of purifier is nature's own. The minute organisms known as bacteria are the chief causes of the impurity of drinking water. These invisible creatures have to live as well as their larger brethren, and they must eat to live. As soon as they have eaten all in the water that there is to feed on they die. Dr. Frankland has recently stated, from his recent examination of water stored for two weeks, that it seems as pure and free from bacteria life as if it had passed through the best of filters, but it seems strange that this should have so recently come under Dr. Frankland's experience. Everyone knows that there is no purer or better water in the world than that which is supplied to seafaring people. Almost any kind of water stored away in a ship's tank becomes absolutely pure after the vessel has been a few weeks at sea. This is usually ascribed in popular language to fermentation, but there is really nothing to ferment: it is simply that the bacteria have eaten everything in the water there is to eat and then died of starvation.

Shoes with Stoves in Them.

An effective means of warming the feet has been patented in Germany. The inventor calls it "heatable shoes." Within the heel of the shoe, which is hollowed out, there is a receptacle for a glowing substance, similar to that used in the Japanese hand-warmers. Between the soles, imbedded in asbestos covers, is a rubber bag, which is filled with water. The water is heated, and as it circulates while the wearer of the shoe is walking, it keeps the surface of the foot warm. A small safety valve is provided so that the bag cannot burst. The warmth given by this sole never rises above 70 degrees Fahrenheit, and will last about eight hours. The sole is slightly thicker than that of a wet-weather boot.

Cities and Morals.

This shifting of the population from the country to the towns is accompanied by a profound change in the habits, thought and mode of life of a large portion of the population. The wits are sharpened and the moral sense is dulled by the excitement and variety of city life. There is a feverish activity arising from the struggle of so many human beings in such keen competition and such close contact with each other. The crowding of the population increases with the value of real estate and the injury to health and morals increases in the same ratio.—Scribner's.

MISSIONS.

Reports from various cities indicate that the charitable work of the order of Deaconesses is reaping splendid results for the Master.

It is estimated that Union Congregational church, Boston, has given $200,000 to foreign missions and $300,000 to home missions and other charities during the seventy-four years of its existence.

Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, of the Volunteers of America, has just completed a week of excellent work among the churches of Chicago in the interest of that class of mission work which she so ably represents.

A novel series of religious services for employes of the Union Traction company was inaugurated by the Sunday Breakfast association at the depot, Fifteenth and Cumberland streets, Philadelphia. President Bean conducted the exercises and an address was made by Rev. Leonard Weaver.

The Chicago Training School for Missions, located at 4949 Indiana avenue, has received the unconditional gift of deeds to property in that city valued at $8,000 to $10,000. The attention of the public is being more and more drawn to this institution, which is putting hundreds of workers into the mission fields of this and other countries. An endowment fund of $100,000 is now greatly needed.

NATURE AND SCIENCE.

The muscles of the mocking bird's larynx are larger in proportion to the size of the bird than those of any other creature.

Recent experiments at the Boston University Medical school show that the X-ray will produce sensation on the cells of the cortex of the brain directly, and without mediation of the nerve filaments, or in other words that the blind may be able to see by training in mental perception.

Dr. Jagadis Chunder Bose, professor of physical science in London, claims a discovery more wonderful than the X-ray, and by which it is possible to flash electric currents through mountains, and ring bells and fire guns many thousand feet away without the use of wires. Prof. Bose says this new ray will do away with dangers caused by fogs, as it will penetrate the thickest fog—in fact, there is nothing it cannot pierce.

In so dry a region as central Australia frogs are found in fair numbers, creeks and claypans "swarming" with them. As the waters dry up the frogs disappear in their burrows, remaining till the rains come again. "Certain species of them," says Spencer, "gorge themselves with water before they go into their retreats, and in times of drought the natives dig them out and obtain enough water from their bodies to satisfy their thirst.

The whole subject of the methods by which seeds are distributed is attracting considerable attention just now. It seems almost impossible to construct any general law by which to explain the reason for things in nature. It does seem, for instance, safe to say that wings are given to seeds to enable them to fly far away from the parent tree, and thus extend the area of territory occupied by the species. But in many of the large-seeded pines—the linden and others—the hollow seeds only are the ones blown away. The solid, perfect seeds remain around the parent tree. The objectors to everything argue that wings are given to fan out light, useless material. But this surely cannot always be.

Every man knows of a position superior to his own that he could fill much better than the incumbent.—Puck.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

The Great McEwen.

McEwen, the renowned hypnotist and mind reader, is giving a week's entertainment at the opera house this week. He came here heralded by the press and public of the places he has visited as the greatest artist in his line ever seen, and his exhibitions here fully bear out the statements. At St. Cloud Germania Hall, was unable every night to accommodate the crowds that flocked to hear him, and on Thursday evening according to the Journal-Press, he turned away over 500 people.

The gentleman is certainly the fairest exponent of the mysterious art we have ever had here. He does not make any absurd claims that he cannot substantiate, but does everything and more than he claims. On Monday evening he devoted considerable time to explaining what hypnotism really is, and wherein it differs from what is known as mesmerism. His remarks were very interesting and instructive to all interested in the subject.

He has not failed to hypnotize and place under his control anyone who would give himself up to his influence and suggestions, and the laughable and ludicious situations and attitudes he places his subjects in nightly keeps the audience in an uproar. On Wednesday he placed one of the young men accompanying him in a cataleptic state, and he lay during the day like a corpse in the show window of Atwood's drug store, and was taken to the opera house to be awakened that evening. There will be two more performances, tonight and tomorrow night, the program each evening being entirely different. McEwen and his wonderful powers are the talk of the town.

Miss Pentreath's condition is even more serious. Her temperature is very high and she is unconscious, and heart complications are feared. That the Lord in his mercy may spare their lives is the prayer of their many faiends.

TELLS A GRAPHIC STORY.

Custer's Operations Against the Sioux Indorsed by Major General Miles.

In Major General Miles' personal recollections of army life a chapter is devoted to General Custer and the Sioux war, the massacre and the campaign that followed. The points of interest in this history of the last great campaign against the Indians are naturally the operations leading to the death of Custer and the operations in Arizona that led to the retiring of General Crook from active command and the transfer of General Miles to that district.

General Miles writes with great feeling and unhesitatingly champions the cause of General Custer in the campaign against Sitting Bull. He states clearly the conditions that prevailed when General Custer moved with the Seventh cavalry into the Indian country, when General Terry, in command of the department, General Sheridan in command of the military district and General Sherman in command of the army, knew not enough of the conditions and circumstances to give definite instructions. General Miles admits that at the time there was a feeling in military circles that General Custer's training in the civil war and his general temper in battle were against him as the commander of an expedition against the hostile Indians, and General Grant insisted that Terry, and not Custer, be placed in command of the expedition. It was admitted, on the other hand, that General Custer had more experience in fighting Indians than General Terry, and that he would be in command of the active column.

General Miles takes the position that General Custer's dispositions for the battle were in direct accordance with the best military strategy, and that he failed to defeat the Indians simply because he was not adequately supported by the seven companies of cavalry that were to act in concert with him. He insists that General Custer did not disobey orders, because the last instructions of General Terry were to make his own dispositions and to use his own judgment. General Miles conducted the winter campaign immediately following the Custer massacre. He was familiar with the Indians who participated in that campaign. He visited the battlefield, traced the line of battle and the development of the fighting, or the progress of the battle, by the position of the dead bodies, and he scouts the idea that General Custer moved up the ravine, a theory that was advanced by some of his critics, but shows that the bodies found in the ravine were those of the 30 or 40 men who had attempted to escape when all their comrades had been slaughtered. He criticises the actions of Major Reno, and incidentally those of Captain Benteen. He tells, in short, a graphic story of what must have been one of the most dramatic battles of history and his discussion is from first to last a defense of the dead Custer and severe condemna

McFADDEN DRUG CO.

The Old Reliable Firm.

P.P. C. GAS COFFEE ROASTER.

The above is a cut of the celebrated GAS ROASTER, which has revolutionized the roasted coffee business. Instead of its being slowly baked over a fire and all the essential oils lost, the coffee in the new roaster is taken up, dropped through the live flame of gas, and repeated until the coffee is thoroughly roasted. The pores of the berry are quickly closed by the flame, retaining all of the oil which makes the difference between a good and bad cup of coffee. In gas roasted coffee the aroma and strength is all retained in the roasted berry. The best estimate makes two pounds of gas roasted coffee equal to three pounds of coffee roasted by the old process. It is so much superior to all other coffees, that we would be pleased to have you give it a trial.
